Article II

OFFERING CIRCULAR

RISK FACTORS

An investment in Opening Night Enterprises, Limited Liability Company involves a high degree of risk. Prospective investors should read these risk factors carefully before deciding whether to invest. The following is a description of what is considered the Companys key challenges and risks. The risks and uncertainties described below are not the only risks and uncertainties faced by the Company. Additional risks and uncertainties not presently known to the Company or known to be material may impair the Companys success.

This Memorandum contains certain forward-looking statements that involve many risks and uncertainties. These statements relate to future events or the Companys future financial performance. In some cases, one can identify forward-looking statements by terminology including could, may, will, should, expect, plan, anticipate, believe, estimate, predict, potential or continue, the negative of these terms or other comparable terminology. These statements are only predictions. Actual events or results may differ materially from those projected as a result of certain of the risk factors set forth below and elsewhere in the Memorandum. The Company cannot guarantee future results, performance or achievements.

No Assurance of Recovery of Capital or Payment of Profits. The Company wishes to emphasize that no one should consider the purchase of the membership interests being offered without recognizing the highly speculative nature of and the risks of loss involved in the purchase of an interest in an enterprise devoted to one or more particular television and/or theatrical productions. Prospective investors should only invest in the Company if they do not require liquidity in their investment and are prepared to lose their entire investment.

Potential Benefits. Though success is not guaranteed, it is expected that the Company may earn revenue not just from the television exploitation of the Program, but thereafter from live stage exploitation ticket sales, which is expected to be augmented by the many viewers of the Program and their past engagement with the musicals and their trajectories.

Uncertainty of Critical or Public Acceptance Minimized. Considerable competition exists among producers in the acquisition of theatrical properties. To some extent, the success or failure of the theatrical venture is dependent upon the ability of the producer to select talent and plays that will appeal to the theater-going public and to produce such work in a desirable manner and in a desirable theater. Further, the Managers hope that the voting process at the end of the Program series will allow them to gain insight into the commercial benefits and challenges of each musical which can subsequently be put to use during the development of the given musicals on stage; an insight that competing producers will not have the ability to harness.

The Company has No Operating History. The Company has recently been formed on January 15, 2017. As such there is no operating history or financial statements on which an investment decision can be based. The likelihood of the success or failure of the Company must be considered in light of the risks, costs, difficulties and delays frequently encountered in establishing a new enterprise, many of which are beyond the Companys control. The Company is subject to all of the risks inherent in the creation of a new enterprise and the competitive environment in which it will operate. There can be no assurance that the Company will prove to be commercially successful or profitable, however, the Managers believe that the prior television exposure will afford the musicals a unique following and will allow the Managers and their partners to utilize marketing, advertising and publicity channels not available to other stage properties.

Limited Business Purpose of Company. The sole business of the Company will be the production of the television series and the presentation of each musical and the exploitation of the rights therein. In any venture the risk of loss is especially high in contrast with the prospects of any profit.

Single Purpose Entities. The customary method of financing legitimate theater business ventures is by the organization of a Limited Liability Company. When one of the musicals referenced hereunder is produced on stage, a specific limited liability company will be organized as a single purpose entity so as to contract and manage for that specific musical. The Company will be the sole managing member and owner of each such single purpose entity as to insure that the Members of the Company shall have the sole and exclusive entitlement to the net revenues that is, revenues subject to deduction for actual running and other costs of each single purpose entity. The capitalization hereunder is expected to cover the capitalization costs of each musicals production budget.

No Disposition of Interests. There is no market for the resale of Membership Interests and none is expected to develop. Although an investor has the right to assign his/her interest in the profits of the Company, with the consent of the Managers, no assignee of an investor of the Company has the right to become a substituted investor in place of his/her assignor, unless the Managers consent thereto in writing, which they are not obligated to do.

In addition, as the Membership Interests of the Company are unregistered securities within the meaning of the Federal and State securities laws, an investor may not transfer his/her Membership Interests without registration of such interests or exemption from the provisions of the applicable securities laws and regulations. The Managers are not obligated to register the Membership Interests at any time or to repurchase any units from any investor. Therefore, an investor should only make a purchase for investment purposes and be prepared to bear the economic risk of this investment for an indefinite period of time.

No Assurance. There is no assurance that the investment contributions made hereunder will be recouped or that the Members will realize a profit as a result of their investment in the Company hereunder.

Subsidiary Rights Income is Uncertain. If the Musical is presented on Broadway for a certain number of performances within a specified period, it is expected that the contracts with the authors of the musicals will allow for the prospective investors hereunder to be entitled to a share in the proceeds from the exploitation of subsidiary rights in the Musical, namely exploitations of the musical following the expiration of the Companys rights therein. If the Company is entitled to share in said subsidiary rights income, it is impossible to determine the extent to which such income will amount.

Potential Conflict of Interest. The interests of the Managers may be in conflict with the interests of the investors because one or more Managers hereunder may serve or be engaged as a producer of the Program or the live exploitation of one or more Musicals hereunder, and, as such, may be entitled to a customary, arms-length, standard producer payment. It may be in the interest of such producers to continue to present a musical on stage, whereas it may be in the interest of the Members to cease operations so that any unused capital may be returned.

The obligations of the Managers to the Company are not exclusive. The Managers and their principals are involved in other theatrical and entertainment-related projects as well as in other business activities. Liabilities incurred and commitments undertaken by the Managers with respect to projects other than the Companys business could adversely affect their ability to manage the Company. Moreover, the Managers are expected to engage in the production of other theatrical productions for their own account, and for others, during the term of the Company. Such activities could be seen as competing with the Company and resulting in potential conflicts of interest.

In addition, the Managers may now or hereafter engage in businesses which provide goods and/or services to the Company which otherwise would be provided by unrelated third parties. By becoming an investor in the Company, investors consent to such transactions as long as they are on terms substantially as favorable to the Company as would have been provided by unrelated third parties.

Contributions to the Capital of the Limited Liability Company. Any monies expended by the Managers prior to the completion of the offering of the Company for items which, if incurred by the Company would have constituted production expenses, weekly operating expenses or other expenses relating to any production of each Musical will be considered equivalent to a cash contribution to the capital of the Company if the Managers elect not to have such monies reimbursed to them. The Managers have not made any such election and, consequently, it cannot be known whether such expenditures will, in fact, be cash contributions to the capital of the Company. In any event, none of such monies will be repaid to the Managers prior to the receipt by the Company of the minimum capitalization unless authorized to be used prior to the minimum capitalization of the Company.

Managers Control. The Managers have complete control over the management of the Company which includes the production of the television series and each Musical and the exploitation of all of the Companys rights. Therefore, investors will not participate in the decision making process as far as management of the Company is concerned and may not hold the Managers liable for any action taken upon the advice of professionals or which do not constitute gross negligence or intentional misconduct.

Abandonment or Close of Production. The Managers have the right to abandon production of the television series and/or one or more Musicals at any time, for any reason whatsoever. In the case of such abandonment, the investors must be prepared for a loss, except to the extent that unspent amounts remain on account. Such amounts will be returned to the Members on a pro-rata basis. The investors may also recoup and/or make a profit for one or more productions even if one or more other productions are cancelled. Losses may be decreased if abandonment of a given production occurs following the vesting of the Companys rights to participate in subsidiary revenue, or if prior merchandising or album income previously had been earned.

Managers Right to Obtain and Make Loans. The Managers may obtain from third parties or any Manager may make loans to be repaid before return of the investors capital contributions without affecting the respective interests of the investors hereunder. If the Managers elect to borrow additional sums or advance funds in the Companys name, such loans or advances may result in considerable delay in the repayment of investors capital contributions to the Company or in a complete loss to investors if the gross receipts are not sufficient to meet operating expenses, repay loans and/or advances and the capital contributions of the investors.

Production of Musical at Minimum Capitalization Reduces Chance of Success. The Company may complete the offering upon raising at least 20,000,000. This amount represents the Managers estimate of the minimum amount required to produce the television series and each Musical for the television series. Capitalizing the Company at such a figure may result in either a less funds with which to meet contingencies or on which to draw for increased advertising or other expenditures that might be required to increase the likelihood of each Musicals success beyond the television series, and/or b a higher likelihood that there may be fewer productions, e.g., that there may be one or two live musical stage exploitations, rather than three. If amounts raised are closer to the Minimum offering amount, it is highly likely that the commercial productions of one more of the musicals will not be on Broadway or otherwise produced in a first class production. If amounts raised are closer to the Maximum offering amount, it is highly likely that the commercial productions at least one of the Musicals will be on Broadway or otherwise produced in a first class production.

Risk of Authorizing Immediate Use of Contribution Prior to Minimum Capitalization of the Company. If the investors have agreed to the use of his or her capital contribution to the Company prior to the minimum capitalization of the Company, such investors may lose part or all of their contribution if the Minimum offering amount is not raised and, as a result, there is no Program or live stage production completed. If the investor has not waived its right of refund, then, in such case, any remaining funds on account shall be paid back to such investors on a pro-rata basis in accordance with relative investment sizes.

Not All Contracts Have Been Entered Into. No written contracts have been entered into by the Company, and the Company expects to use the funds raised hereunder so as to transact with the necessary parties, obtain rights, and enter into the agreements necessary to effectuate the Companys purposes hereunder.

No Withdrawal from Company. Prospective investors should note that once their investment has been approved by the Managers and they become a Member of the Company, they cannot withdraw from the Company and demand the return of their investment. There will be no interest accrued, paid or available for withdrawal on contributions. The investments hereunder may not be used as security for any loan, debt or other obligation.

Offering Price of the Units Arbitrarily Determined. The offering price of 5,000 per unit has been arbitrarily determined by the Company based upon such factors as the proceeds to be raised by this offering, the lack of a public market for the Company interests and the capital requirements of the Company. There is no relationship whatsoever between such offering price and the assets or book value of the Company, or any other recognized criteria of value.

Federal Income Tax Consequences. The Company has not obtained and will not seek to obtain a ruling from the Internal Revenue Service or an opinion of counsel as to its status as a partnership for federal income tax purposes or as to any other issue. Prospective investors should consult their own tax advisers as to the tax consequences of investment in the Company.

Article III USE OF PROCEEDS OF ISSUER

The net proceeds of the offering are estimated to be a minimum of 20,000,000 unless loans or prior contributions comprise part of the minimum capitalization and a maximum of 50,000,000, which includes the production costs of the television series and mounting of each musical up to the opening of each show on a Broadway stage in New York City, not to include weekly stage running costs to be paid by gross weekly box office receipts, or unanticipated expenses such as litigation.

The budgets available for review with this offering represent the Companys best estimate of its allocation of the net proceeds of this offering based upon its current plans and estimates regarding its anticipated expenditures. Actual expenditures to be made cannot be predicted with any degree of certainty and may vary substantially from these estimates. In particular, many of the personnel to be used in or in connection with the production of the Musical have not yet been selected and none of the key contracts have been negotiated.

The Managers reserve the right to revise budgets if production costs become more or less expensive or if additional production items are required. The Managers make no representations with respect to the final actual production costs or cost of any items of production expenses. Furthermore, if the Managers in their best judgment and in good faith determine that a lesser sum than the maximum capitalization is sufficient to meet the production requirements of the Musical, it is anticipated that amongst other things, the reserve and advertising allocations will be reduced.

In the Managers best judgment, the minimum net proceeds under this offering will be sufficient to produce the television series and each Musical from the television series but one, two or three, and no more than three, live stage musicals may be produced and presented.

Article IV DESCRIPTION OF THE BUSINESS

Television Series and Theatrical Industry

The Business plan for this venture consists of exploitation in two different media, namely television exhibition and live stage production.

It is expected that the television show will display to millions of viewers a musical competition program that highlights the competitive, challenging and dramatic creative process of the teams composing, writing, and mounting a show intended for stages throughout the United States.

The 13-week, reality competition television series is designed to portray in an entertaining and dramatic manner the struggle of creating an artistically and financially successful musical.

The entire musical is not seen during the series. Guided by mentors, only those deemed most entertaining will be performed. The story of the creators and their relationships and conflicts as they face the challenges of competition and musical development will offer another storyline.

OFFERING CIRCULAR

Following the conclusion of the television series the Company shall enter the theatrical revenue-generating phase.

The commercial theater business in the United States is generally separated into two categories, New York and outside New York. New York is the central and principal venue for commercial theater in the United States with a significant resident population of theatergoers and a tourist population that attends the commercial theater regularly. We anticipate, due to the notoriety of each of the three musicals, that a Broadway production will occur. But it is important to note that for our business model, the litmus test for financial success of this endeavor is not predicated on a production occurring on a Broadway stage. In fact, the overhead and, especially, the marketing, advertising and publicity costs are significantly less in theaters outside New York, making for the potential of a greater financial return, assuming that the number of people attending and ticket prices are the same. Broadway, or the commercial theatrical industry in New York City, however, does provide for the greater likelihood of a open-ended runs and b premium higher ticket pricing.

The Managers shall obtain the right to present the play live on any stage from the author or authors of the play or musical. Such option is exclusive with respect to professional productions with a stock and amateur holdback in the United States, the British Isles, Australia, New Zealand and Canada, as well as certain other international territories. It is typical for the producer to pay the writer or writers a non-recoupable advance against a royalty to be paid to the writer or writers from the gross weekly box office receipts derived from the producers presentation or presentations of the play or musical. The royalty paid to the author or authors of a play is typically 4.5% of the gross weekly box office receipts. Occasionally, a play or musical is based on another work or on the life of a person. On these occasions, the producer would be required to obtain such rights to the other work or from the person who is the subject matter of the work. Typically, the holders of such rights would also be entitled to a royalty based on the gross weekly box office receipts; such amount is usually between 1% and 2%. Gross weekly box office receipts are usually defined as the receipts received from the sale of tickets for the show minus credit card costs, applicable amusement or sales tickets and certain pension and welfare union payments for Broadway only that do not usually amount to over 10%. On many occasions, the producers are able to negotiate the option to pay authors a share of weekly operating profits if any as opposed to a gross participation and the Managers will employ every best effort to do so and expect to do so.

When a producer is presenting a new play or musical or is presenting a play or musical that has not been previously presented in the United States, the producer will usually be entitled to vest a percentage of revenues earned by the author or authors in the future from the exploitation of the play or musical, including revenues from a film or television adaptation of the play or musical and future stage presentations of the work. This revenue participation is called subsidiary rights participation and the percentage is vested by the producer based upon the number of performances of the play or musical that is presented by him or her. The top subsidiary rights participation that can be earned by the producer is typically from 40% to 50%.

The theatrical producer with an option on a play or musical will usually form a legal entity in which to raise funds to produce the play or musical and to produce the play or musical. The producer will also begin the process of preparing the necessary offering papers to legally raise money from the public, usually as an exempt offering under federal and state securities laws. The customary entity employed in the theatrical industry is a Limited Liability Company. The producer will assign to such entity the rights he or she obtained by virtue of the option agreement with the writer or writers of the play or musical. Very often the producer will team with other producers to partner with him or her in presenting the play or musical and/or in raising the necessary financing. Because with this offering the funding is being raised up front for the television production and the production of all three musicals that are featured on the Program, the Managers expect to save money, to the benefit of the Members hereunder, as a result of not having to engage professionals to effectuate offerings to capitalize three disparate live stage companies, or to give away substantial portions of the profits to a partners, b fund raisers and c other parties assisting in the capitalization. Moreover, since three musicals are expected to be produced, the gains from one or two may offset losses from another.

The producers of the play or musical will assemble the business and creative elements and personnel for the presentation of the play or musical. On the business side, the producers will retain a theatrical attorney, a general manager, a company manager, a theatrical press agent, a marketing specialist, an advertising firm, a production supervisor and other related personnel. On the creative side, the producers will retain a director, a cast and chorus, a choreographer, designers for the set, costumes, lighting, sound, a stage manager, a musical director, a conductor, a casting director and other related personnel. The compensation paid to the above-mentioned personnel is often paid in accordance with applicable collective bargaining organization rules. Many are entitled to royalties or otherwise increase weekly expenses, including the producers. In addition to the above, the producers must license a theater or, if producing a tour, must license a number of theaters in each city that it is planning to tour the show. Theater licenses often provide that the production pay a fixed rent, plus the expenses associated with the running of the theater facility such as ushers, climate control, utilities and equipment and a royalty based on a percentage of gross weekly box office receipts.

Developmental theaters that provided development towards the production of one or more musicals may be entitled to a royalty from subsequent productions on Broadway and/or in other commercial settings.

The show will usually require significant rehearsals prior to public performances of the play or musical. Rehearsals can typically be from four to fourteen weeks. Prior to a show opening on Broadway or Off- Broadway, it will run a number of preview performances before paying audience members. These preview performances will allow the producers and the creative personnel the chance to see how certain material is received by the audience and to make changes, if necessary, prior to the opening of the show. Just prior or after a play or musical opens, the critics for newspapers, television, magazines and other media will see the play or musical and write their reviews. Usually, the first reviews for the play or musical appear in public on opening night or the morning after.

Typically, a medium to large theater can gross between 250,000 and 2,000,000 per week. The point at which a given show breaks even depends upon a great many factors. On average, producers of a play or musical will attempt to keep the break-even point for a production at no more than 60% of the theaters potential gross. As noted above, many of a shows personnel including the producers are paid a percentage of a shows gross weekly box office receipts, weekly fee or share of weekly operating profits. As such, the amount of such compensation will vary from week to week depending upon the number of tickets sold.

Typically, as a show makes operating profits, 100% of such profits are paid to investors of the show until the investors are paid back in full. Thereafter, the investors and producers each are entitled to 50% of the adjusted net profits from the show. In this case, however, the three musicals will be cross-collateralized for the benefit of investors. Namely, even after the recoupment of a given production, all net cash flow shall inure to the investors on a pro-rata basis until the investments hereunder which are being used for a package consisting of one television show and three stage productions are recouped in their entirety. In such a manner the gains from one musical will offset the losses of another; only following the recoupment by the investors of all monies invested hereunder will the Managers participate in Company Net Profits.
