Re: The MONY Group Inc.
Incoming letter dated November 21, 2002

Dear Mr. Gallagher:

This is in response to your letter dated November 21, 2002 concerning the shareholder proposal submitted to MONY by John Jennings Crapo. We also have received a letter from the proponent dated November 22, 2002. Our response is attached to the enclosed photocopy of your correspondence. By doing this, we avoid having to recite or summarize the facts set forth in the correspondence. Copies of all of the correspondence also will be provided to the proponent.

In connection with this matter, your attention is directed to the enclosure, which sets forth a brief discussion of the Division's informal procedures regarding shareholder proposals.

Sincerely,

Martin P. Dunn

Re: The MONY Group Inc. ('MONY')-Incoming letter dated November 21, 2002

Dear Ms. Lee:

Pursuant to our telephone conversation of May 7, 2003, I enclose a copy of the complete set of documents MONY received from the SEC, relative to the above referenced matter. As we discussed, apparently there was an error made when compiling these documents for the Public Reference Room. As such, both the Westlaw and Lexis websites have erroneously included Motorola letters with the MONY documents.

If you have any questions in connection with this matter, please let me know. Thank you for your assistance in this matter.

Very truly yours,

M. Micaela Dowd

Re: The MONY Group Inc. - Shareholder Proposal

Ladies and Gentlemen:

On behalf of The MONY Group Inc., a Delaware corporation (the "Company"), and in accordance with Rule 14a-8(j) under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended, I have enclosed for filing the following documents:

1. Six copies of the proposal (the "Proposal") and supporting statement (the "Supporting Statement") dated June 2, 2002 received from John Jennings Crapo ("Proponent") on June 11, 2002 for inclusion in the Company's proxy statement for its 2003 annual meeting of shareholders (the "2003 Proxy Statement");
2. Six copies of a letter dated June 16, 2002 received from Proponent on June 19, 2002 enclosing certain exhibits (the "Second Proponent Letter");
3. Six copies of a letter dated June 21, 2002 sent by the Company to Proponent (the "Company Letter") notifying Proponent, among other matters, of specific requirements of the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission") that Proponent's submission failed to satisfy and how Proponent could remedy those deficiencies;
4. Six copies of a letter dated June 27, 2002 (the "Third Proponent Letter") received from Proponent on July 1, 2002 enclosing certain exhibits; and
5. Six additional copies of this letter.

In accordance with Rule 14a-8(j), a copy of this letter is being mailed on this date to Proponent to notify Proponent of the Company's intention to omit the Proposal and the Supporting Statement from the 2003 Proxy Statement and related form of proxy (together, the "2003 Proxy Materials"). The Company intends to file its definitive 2003 Proxy Materials with the Commission on or about April 1, 2003. Accordingly, pursuant to Rule 14a-8(j), this letter is being submitted not less than 80 days before the Company files its definitive 2003 Proxy Materials.

As discussed below, the Company intends to omit the Proposal and the Supporting Statement from the 2003 Proxy Materials because (i) the Proposal and Supporting Statement exceed 500 words, (ii) the Company has already substantially implemented the Proposal, (iii) the Proposal and Supporting Statement contain vague and indefinite statements and (iv) the Proposal is intended to address personal grievances.

The Proposal and Supporting Statement Exceeds 500 Words

Rule 14a-8(d) requires a proposal, including any accompanying supporting statement, to be no more than 500 words in length. The Proposal and the Supporting Statement exceed 500 words. Rule 14a-8(f)(1) permits a company to exclude a proposal and accompanying supporting statement that exceed the 500-word limitation if the shareholder is notified of the deficiency within 14 days of the company's receipt of the proposal and the proponent fails to cure the deficiency within 14 days of receipt of the deficiency notice.

On June 11, 2002, the Company received the Proposal and the Supporting Statement from Proponent. Included with the Proposal and appearing to be a component of the Supporting Statement are 106 pages of exhibits identified by Proponent "as documentation of shareholder intent." These exhibits consist of a variety of documents seemingly unrelated to the Proposal such as copies of police department property receipts, newspaper clippings, dental plan enrollment forms, a bookstore receipt and Proponent's sixth grade grammar school report card. On June 19, 2002, the Company received the Second Proponent Letter from Proponent requesting that additional exhibits consisting of 142 pages "be added to the file of my shareholder proposal submission." On June 21, 2002, the undersigned sent the Company Letter to Proponent by certified mail and by U.S. Post Office Express Mail informing Proponent that the Proposal and Supporting Statement exceeded the 500-word limit and advising Proponent to revise his proposal and accompanying supporting statement accordingly. The Company Letter also advised Proponent that his response to the Company Letter must be postmarked or electronically transmitted to the Company within 14 days of his receipt of the Company Letter. The Company has received confirmation that the Company Letter was received by Proponent on June 24, 2002. On July 1, 2002, the Company received the Third Proponent Letter from Proponent. The Third Proponent Letter did not revise the Proposal and Supporting Statement to bring them into compliance with the 500-word limitation. To the contrary, Proponent in the Third Proponent Letter appears to request that the Company add additional exhibits, consisting of 17 pages, to Proponent's original submission.

The Proposal and Supporting Statement exceed the 500-word limit, regardless of whether the many pages of exhibits delivered by Proponent with his correspondence are included in the word count. As of this date, Proponent has not acknowledged, and has failed to cure, the deficiency identified in the Company Letter. Accordingly, we believe that the Proposal and the Supporting Statement may be omitted in their entirety pursuant to Rule 14a-8(d).

The Company has Already Substantially Implemented the Proposal

Rule 14a-8(i)(10) permits a shareholder's proposal to be excluded if the proposal has already been substantially implemented. The Staff has consistently taken the position that a shareholder proposal has been substantially implemented within the scope of Rule 14a-8(i)(10) when the company already has established policies and procedures relating to the proposal, or has implemented the essential objectives of the proposal. For a proposal to be omitted, the proposal need not have been implemented fully or precisely as presented by the proponent, but rather, the standard is whether the company's applicable policies, practices and procedures compare favorably to the guidelines of the proposal. See Exchange Act Release No. 34-20091 (August 16, 1983); The Talbots Inc. (available April 5, 2002); and Texaco, Inc. (available March 28, 1991).

The Proposal seeks publication in the Company's proxy statements of information regarding its "charitable donation program." The Company already publishes on its website (www.mony.com) extensive information regarding its charitable contribution activities conducted through The MONY Foundation, the Company's tax exempt private foundation. Virtually all of the Company's charitable contributions are made through The MONY Foundation. Along with other supporting information, this website provides detailed information regarding contribution guidelines and standards, identification and descriptions of specific programs sponsored by The MONY Foundation, grant-making guidelines (including categories of programs The MONY Foundation will not consider for grants) and relevant application procedures. The MONY Foundation is also required to file an annual tax return with the Internal Revenue Service on Form 990-PF, which also identifies the recipients of grants made by The MONY Foundation and the amounts of specific grants made during the applicable periods. The MONY Foundation is required by IRS regulations to deliver a copy of its Form 990-PF to any person who requests it. Like many other charitable foundations, The MONY Foundation's Form 990-PF is made available for review at no charge on the www.guidestar.com website, a national database of nonprofit organizations. The www.mony.com website advises readers that The MONY Foundation's Form 990-PF will be provided at no charge upon request and that it is also available for review on the www.guidestar.com website.

Based on the public's ready access to information regarding the Company's charitable giving activities described above, we believe the Company has satisfied the "substantially implemented" standard. Accordingly, we believe that the Proposal and the Supporting Statement may be omitted in their entirety pursuant to Rule 14a-8(i)(10).

The Proposal and Supporting Statement Contain Vague and Indefinite Statements.

Rule 14a-8(i)(3) permits a shareholder's proposal to be excluded if the proposal or supporting statement is contrary to any of the Commission's proxy rules, including Rule 14a-5(a), which requires that information in proxy solicitation materials be "clearly presented."

Proponent seeks publication in the Company's proxy statements of "a report containing an item concerning the charitable donations program of the Group for the immediate past calendar year with the following information: (i) an explanation of at least five hundred words explaining the standards of the Group and procedures of said corporation governing its [sic] donations to United States of America Internal Revenue Service approved private foundations to include standards for denial of such help [and] (ii) an enumeration of such said qualifying charities and approved foundations which our Group Board of Directors plans to help in the ensuing calendar, including with each charity an elucidation of at least twenty-five words how it complied with the standards and procedures enumerated in i."

The Proposal contains terms and statements that are so vague and indefinite that Company shareholders would not comprehend what they are being asked to vote on and management would not know how to implement if required to do so. For example, the phrase "such said qualifying charities" used in clause (ii) above is ambiguous and not susceptible to interpretation, given that there is no earlier defining reference to "qualifying charities" in the Proposal. Additional ambiguity and potential confusion is created by requiring that the Company's Board identify the "qualifying charities and approved foundations" that the Board "plans to help in the ensuing calendar, including with each charity an elucidation of at least twenty-five words ..." It is unclear what disclosure period is intended by the reference to "ensuing calendar." Proponent could have intended calendar year or calendar quarter, for example. The intended scope of the term "help" is also unclear. Would "help" be limited to financial assistance provided by the Company or would other forms of assistance, such as making the Company's offices available for use by charitable organizations or Company promotion of charity-sponsored events and employee volunteerism also constitute "help"? Furthermore, it would be impossible for the Company's Board to predict, at the time of the contemplated proxy disclosure, what organizations it planned to "help" in the future. Clarification of the vague nature of the Proposal is not to be found in the Supporting Statement, a rambling discourse on personal and seemingly unrelated matters that includes numerous exhibits that bear no discernable connection to the Proposal and only serves to further confuse the meaning of the Proposal.

The Staff has permitted the exclusion of vague and indefinite materials from proxy statements in the past. See, e.g., IDACORP, Inc. (available July 19, 2002) (proposal that various reports be considered by a committee of shareholders excludable as vague and indefinite); Northeast Utilities Service Company (available April 9, 2001) (similar charitable donations report proposal excludable as vague and indefinite); and Tri-Continental Corporation (available March 14, 2000) (proposal seeking divestiture of investment portfolio excludable as vague).

Accordingly, we believe that the Proposal and the Supporting Statement may be omitted in their entirety pursuant to Rule 14a-8(i)(3).

The Proposal is Intended to Address Personal Grievances

Rule 14a-8(i)(4) provides that a company may omit a proposal from its proxy materials if the proposal "relates to the redress of a personal claim or grievance against the company or any other person, or if it is designed to result in a benefit to [the proponent], or to further a personal interest, which is not shared by the other shareholders at large."

The Supporting Statement appears to identify several perceived slights or indignities suffered by Proponent in his past contacts with various people, which confirms that the driving force behind the Proposal is a personal grievance, rather than the goal of achieving a result that may be of general interest to Company shareholders. In what appears to be a reference in the Supporting Statement to the annual meeting of The Advest Group, Inc. held on January 27, 2000, Proponent states "Shareholder proponent presented proposal January 27 2000.... In an attempt to correct misleading statements in the opposition statement of the Group Board of Directors to shareholder proposal proponent handed it to Hon Mr Kurtz who handed it to Group General Counsel Mr Kuckro who glanced at report then put report on table...."¹ The Supporting Statement also states that "he was an employee of a Group partner's parents in 1955 and his inaccessibility to records prohibits his qualifying for more social security benefits...." and that "Group failed to send proponent list of names and addresses of stockholders and report of last year's stockholder meeting..."

To our knowledge, Proponent has never contacted the Company to request information as to its charitable donation programs. As described above, a significant amount of information regarding the Company's charitable giving programs is already publicly available and would be delivered by the Company upon request. Consequently, while the Proposal appears to be directed at the Company, Proponent's grievance is not shared with other shareholders and is derived from personal claims or grievances against others (in this case, officers and/or directors of The Advest Group, Inc., a company now owned by the Company). See, e.g., Fleet Financial Group, Inc. (available June 25, 1996). The Company's opinion that the Proposal is a response to a personal grievance is reinforced by the apparent absence in the Supporting Statement of any discernable support for or discussion relating to the Proposal.

¹ The Advest Group, Inc. was acquired by the Company in early 2001. Grant Kurtz has been the Chief Executive Officer of The Advest Group, Inc. since 1999 and Lee Kuckro has been the General Counsel of The Advest Group, Inc. since 1978. The Advest Group, Inc., a public company before its acquisition by the Company, held an annual meeting of shareholders on January 27, 2000, which Mr. Crapo attended.

Accordingly, we believe that the Proposal and the Supporting Statement may be omitted in their entirety pursuant to Rule 14a-8(i)(4).

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, it is the Company's view that the Proposal and the Supporting Statement may be omitted from the 2003 Proxy Materials pursuant to Rules 14a-8(d), 14a-8(i)(10), 14a-8(i)(3) and 14a-8(i)(4).

I respectfully request confirmation on behalf of the Company that the Commission will not recommend enforcement action if the Company omits the Proposal and the Supporting Statement from the 2003 Proxy Materials.

If the Staff has any questions or comments regarding this matter, or if additional information is required to support the Company's position, please contact the undersigned at (212) 708-2232. Please acknowledge receipt of this filing by date-stamping the enclosed additional copy of this letter and returning it in the enclosed pre-addressed, stamped envelope.

Very truly yours,

Re: The MONY Group Inc. - Shareholder Proposal

Dear Mr. Crapo:

On behalf of The MONY Group Inc., you are advised that we received a letter from you on June 11, 2002 containing a shareholder proposal and supporting statement submitted for inclusion in our proxy statement to be distributed in connection with our 2003 annual meeting. Delivered with your letter were copies of numerous other documents identified by you as exhibits and addenda. You are also advised that we received a second letter from you on June 19, 2002 in which you requested an amendment to the last paragraph of your previously delivered supporting statement. Delivered with this second letter were copies of numerous other documents identified by you as exhibits. The purpose of this letter is to provide you with the notice referred to in Rule 14a-8(f) under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

You are advised that you have not satisfied the requirements for submission of a shareholder proposal under Rule 14a-8(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Rule 14a-8(d) requires that your proposal, including any accompanying supporting statement, may not exceed 500 words. Your shareholder proposal and accompanying supporting statement exceed the 500 word limit. Please revise your proposal and accompanying supporting statement accordingly.

Unless your revised proposal and accompanying supporting statement are provided to us within the time frame noted below, your proposal will be excluded from our proxy statement.

We note that there may be other aspects of your proposal that would allow us to exclude it from our proxy statement in accordance with Rule 14a-8. We reserve the right to omit your proposal for any other reason permitted by Rule 14a-8.

Please note that your response to this letter must be postmarked or transmitted electronically no later than 14 calendar days from the date of your receipt of this letter in accordance with Rule 14a-8(f).

Very truly yours,

Daniel J. Callaghan

Annuling Corporate Perks and Restructuring Corporate Salaries

To Whom It May Concern:

The following Proposal is to be included in the next Annual Shareholders meeting. As a shareholder of 1800 shares of Corporate stock, I am hereby requesting that the Board of Directors take the following action to level the playing field as it affects Corporate Perks and Salaries.

For the past twenty years, many top ranking executives known as Corporate America have taken advantage of Shareholders by enriching themselves excessively with stock options, bonuses, exceedingly high salaries and increases, bloated pensions and retirement funds, golden parachutes and the like. They seem to have forgotten that they are nothing more than employees of a company established in a democratic nation and governed by democratic rules. Instead, they act as if they are the Lords of a Fiefdom where they can do as they damn well please. As such, they have gotten away with these excesses for reasons that have been clearly stated in the press, of which I am sure many of us have read.

These excesses have culminated in the recent scandals of accounting improprieties that were perpetrated by more than 20 corporations so far, and who knows how many more will be found guilty before it is all over. The reasons for these scandals have been articulated in the press and need no further explanation. These excesses and subsequent scandals have caused shareholders to lose confidence and respect for Corporate America to the point where the stock market has been adversely affected to a very serious degree.

While Congress is falling all over themselves to put forth all kinds of laws to prevent excesses and accounting improprieties in the future, what will arise out of all this activity will probably be watered down bills, if at all, without any teeth, not untypical of Congressional legislation, or legislation that has not been thought through very carefully. Therefore, to forestall any future scandals by Corporate America, and to restore a level playing field, BE IT RESOLVED that shareholders mandate that the Board of Directors take the following action:

- 1. Eliminate all future stock options and rescind all stock options that have not been exercised. If the latter cannot be done legally, expense all those that have not been exercised. This also applies to the Board of Directors.*
- 2. Eliminate all bonuses and replace incentive awards with a merit system of not more than a twenty (20) percent increase for employees below the executive level, and a maximum increase of fifteen (15) percent for employees at the executive level.*
- 3. Limit severance payments to not more than two years salary for all employees.*
- 4. Eliminate any other perks to Corporate America that have not been granted to all employees.*
- 5. Eliminate all future golden parachutes and rescind all those that have been granted. If that cannot be done legally, then grant all employees the same privilege. There is nothing special about executives, they are simply employees like everyone else.*
- 6. Eliminate all hiring bonuses.*
- 7. Eliminate loans to any member of the corporation, and recall all those that have been granted.*
- 8. Eliminate the repurchase of stock from any member of the Corporation.*
- 9. Eliminate any reversal of the "strike prices" of existing stock options.*
- 10. Eliminate the granting of consultancy contracts to retiring executives. This is just another boondoggle.*
- 11. Eliminate any special retention payments to executives.*
- 12. Eliminate the purchase of any special insurance policies for Corporate America that are not in compliance with the Corporate insurance policy prevailing for all employees.*
- 13. Eliminate any special monetary or other financial grants to retiring executives.*
- 14. Limit the payment to Board of Directors to no more than $50,000. per year, and provide reasonable payments to the Board for attending meetings.*
- 15. Due to the excess salaries granted to Corporate America, place a lid on executive salaries of more than one (1) million dollars until their* pay reaches ten (10) times the average corporate wage. Thereafter, their wages can be increased in keeping with the merit increase system set forth above.

- 16. Eliminate the use of so called pension profits to bolster the bottom line.*
- 17. Should there be any evidence of accounting impropriety or manipulation of accounts that places the Corporation under a cloud and causes the stock price to drop as a result thereof, the top five Corporate executives whose names are included in the Annual Meeting and Proxy Statement, and the Chief Legal Counsel, if his or her name is not included therein, shall resign immediately with a loss of all pension and severance rights.*
- 18. If any CEO pursues a merger that places the Corporation under a huge and burdensome debt liability that does not result in an improvement of the price of Corporate stock within two years of the conclusion of the merger, shall immediately resign.*

Respectfully submitted,

RE: Motorola, Inc.

Dear Chris Scumas:

We received on October 14, 2002, your letter to the Secretary of Motorola, requesting that your proposal ("Proposal") be included in the next Annual Shareholders meeting. Mr. Peter Lawson, Motorola's Secretary, has referred your letter to me for consideration.

Rule 14a-8 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 contains eligibility and procedural requirements for shareholders who wish to include a proposal in a company's proxy materials. As discussed below, you have not met these eligibility and procedural requirements. You must prove your eligibility and revise the Proposal to comply with the procedural requirements by responding to this letter by no later than 14 calendar days after your receipt of this letter. Your response must be postmarked, or transmitted electronically, by no later than 14 calendar days after your receipt of this letter. Motorola may exclude your Proposal if you do not meet the eligibility requirements and comply with the procedural requirements at that time.

Eligibility Deficiencies

You state in your letter that you are "a shareholder of 1800 shares of Corporate stock". The Company's records do not show you as a registered holder of shares of Motorola common stock.

Pursuant to Rule 14a-8(b), if you are not a registered holder, you must prove your eligibility to submit a proposal to Motorola by submitting, at the time you submit your Proposal, a written statement from the "record holder of your shares" verifying that, at the time that you submitted your Proposal, you had continuously held more than $2000 of shares of Motorola common stock for at least one year. You must also include your own written statement that you intend to continue to hold the securities through the date of the meeting of shareholders.

Motorola may exclude your proposal if you do not meet these eligibility requirements. Since you did not prove your eligibility at the time that you submitted your Proposal, you must prove your eligibility as discussed above by responding to this letter by no later than 14 days calendar days after your receipt of this letter.

Chris Scumas Letter
October 15, 2002

Procedural Deficiencies

Pursuant to Rule 14a-8(c) each shareholder may submit no more than one proposal to a company for a particular shareholders' meeting. We believe that in effect your Proposal includes multiple proposals relating to annulling corporate perks, restructuring corporate salaries, as well as several other matters. Your Proposal will need to be revised to comply with the one proposal requirement of Rule 14a-8(c).

Pursuant to Rule 14a-8(d) a shareholder proposal, including any accompanying supporting statement, may not exceed 500 words. Your Proposal exceeds this 500-word limitation. Your Proposal will need to be revised to comply with the 500 word requirement of Rule 14a-8(d).

Motorola may exclude your Proposal if you do not revise the Proposal to comply with the above procedural requirements. Your response to the procedural deficiencies described in this letter must be postmarked, or transmitted electronically, by no later than 14 calendar days after your receipt of this letter.

Lastly, we note the use of the word "damn" in the first paragraph of the Proposal. The use of profanity in a statement to be included in the Company's proxy statement is inappropriate. The Proposal will also need to be revised to exclude the use of profanity.

Sincerely,

Carol Forsyte

Jury awards $500G to postal worker over retaliation

A federal jury yesterday awarded $500,000 to a black U.S. postal clerk who testified she endured eight years of humiliating harassment in her job. Co-workers called Bell "nigger" and "nigger" and punched postcards at her. She got the nerve to complain to federal civil rights officials.

The jury found the Postal Service retaliated against Bell in 1997 after she filed a discrimination suit with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Soon after she lodged the complaint, Bell Housley ordered her to sick leave, according to Smith. She also received a letter in August, 1997, saying she was fired.

"She had been chronically absent," Housley Smith said.

Cobb said years of harassment took a toll on Bell's health.

"All of a sudden she got hit for being gay and then she got hit for being a lesbian," Cobb said.

Bell was fired in 1997 after she was fired for being a lesbian. Cobb said.

"There was no retaliation. The people who took the actions they did were not even aware of the EEO claim," said attorney Healy.

Bell faced disciplinary measures because she did not show up for work and had used up her sick leave, according to Housley.

"She had been chronically absent," Housley Smith said.

Cobb said years of harassment took a toll on Bell's health.

The jury awarded $500,000 in monetary damages for mental anguish, including medical treatment, and $50,000 in punitive damages. The jury also awarded $50,000 in attorney's fees and costs.

BACKGROUND

This case has a lengthy history. After a justice of this court allowed FSA's motion to dismiss under Mass.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6), the Appeals Court reversed. See Fabiano v. Boston Redevelopment Auth., 49 Mass.App.Ct. 66 (2000). After remand, the defendants moved for summary judgment before this court. This motion was denied on February 27, 2001 (Fahey, J.). The relevant history of this lengthy litigation is detailed in these two decisions. After the submission of a new affidavit by Paul J. Senk ("Senk"), the Manager of Real Estate, Windsor Facilities Service Office of the United States Postal Service ("USPS"), the defendants again move for summary judgment.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

This court grants summary judgment where there are no genuine issues of material fact and where the summary judgment record entitles the moving party to judgment as a matter of law. See Cassesso v. Commissioner of Correction, 390 Mass. 419, 422 (1983); Community Nat'l Bank v. Dawes, 369 Mass. 550, 553 (1976); Mass. R. Civ. P. 56(c). The moving party bears the burden of affirmatively demonstrating that there is no genuine issue of material fact on every relevant issue. See Pederson v. Time, Inc., 404 Mass. 14, 17 (1989). A party moving for summary judgment who does not bear the burden of proof at trial may demonstrate the absence of a triable issue either by submitting affirmative evidence negating an essential element of the nonmoving party's case or by showing that the nonmoving party has no reasonable expectation of proving an essential element of its case at trial. See Flesner v. Technical Communications Corp., 410 Mass. 805, 809 (1991); See also Kourouvacilis v. General Motors Corp., 410 Mass. 706, 716 (1991).

DISCUSSION

The Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution immunizes the activities of the federal government from state interference. See Goodyear Atomic Corp. v. Miller, 486 U.S. 174, 180 n.1 (1988); see also United States Postal Service v. Greenwich, 901 F. Supp. 500, 505 (D.Conn. 1995).

In her decision, Judge Fahey held that the USPS had failed to demonstrate that it would invoke its immunity power if this Court were to grant any relief sought by Fabiano. On the new Motion for Summary Judgment, the sole issue before this court is whether Senk, in his authority as a Contracting Officer for the USPS, invoked the immunity from local zoning regulations on behalf of the USPS and that this Court can no longer grant any of the relief sought by Fabiano.

Before considering the merits of the affidavit, this Court must first determine whether Senk has the authority to invoke sovereign immunity on behalf of the USPS. Fabiano argues that Senk, as a Contracting Officer, lacks the authority to invoke such power on behalf of the USPS. In support of her argument, Fabiano points to the USPS Purchasing Manual, which sets out the authority of a "contracting officer." The Purchasing Manual gives the contracting officer "the authority to enter into, administer, and terminate contracts and to make related decisions." The manual also gives contracting officers "wide latitude to exercise sound business judgment based on the competitive and business needs of the Postal Service."

Fabiano fails to raise more than unsubstantiated speculation that Senk lacks the authority to invoke USPS' immunity. The language of the Purchasing Manual, while vague, certainly does not preclude the invocation of USPS immunity by a Contracting

Officer in regard to leases and local zoning regulations. It would seem unreasonable that such local decisions could only be made by the highest echelons of the USPS. Further, there is nothing in the record that demonstrates such a hierarchical decision system at the USPS. USPS regulations speak to the very point of delegation. The regulations allow any of the powers of the Postmaster General, including the right to invoke the sovereign immunity doctrine, to any officer, employee, or agency of the Postal Service. See 39 CFR 3.5.

In his affidavit, Senk states that he is a Contracting Officer for the lease between the USPS and FSA and that he is responsible for the lessor's compliance with the terms of the Lease. He claims to have the authority to amend the lease with FSA and has done so to eliminate the contractual requirement that FSA comply with local zoning ordinances. Finally, Senk states:

"Based upon its immunity to local zoning and land use ordinances, the USPS will remain at 1575 Tremont Street for the full lease term, and will not consent to any alterations to the premises at 1575 Tremont Street, regardless of any decision by the Court in this action."

This unequivocal affidavit satisfies the Court that the USPS intends to invoke its sovereign immunity power with respect to the 1575 Tremont Street property. As such, FSA is derivatively immune from any action by Fabiano.

As no genuine issue of material fact exists in the case, this Court finds that the Senk affidavit sufficiently demonstrates the USPS' decision to invoke its immunity from local zoning regulations effecting the property at 1575 Tremont Street. As the Court can no longer grant the relief sought by Fabiano, the Motion for Summary Judgment must be granted.

 Your schools are trying to help your child to develop habits and traits necessary for good citizenship, as well as to improve scholarship. No form of report card can take the place of a personal visit. The principal and teachers, when not engaged in teaching duties, will be glad to confer with you regarding your child's progress. The home and the school should work together for the best interest of the child.

Introducing a dental plan just for you.

Now for the first time, you can purchase dental coverage from Altus Dental at affordable group rates. But don't wait, this enrollment for Retirees of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts ends May 10, 2002.

Coverage starts on July 1, 2002.

Take advantage of great rates.

Preventive dental care helps you take care of your smile and keeps small problems from becoming big health worries. Having dental insurance helps you pay for the most common dental procedures.

Sign up now and you'll enjoy:

- Individual coverage at $32.36 per month; family coverage at $77.16 per month.*
- Convenient monthly deduction from your pension.
- Coverage for cleanings, fillings and more!
- Toll-free customer service.
- Instant online access to benefit and eligibility information.
- * Rates are valid from July 1, 2002 - June 30, 2003.

Who's Altus Dental?

Altus Dental brings you comprehensive benefits and first-class service. Based in southern New England, we are a family of commonly-owned and managed dental benefits companies with plans designed by dental benefit experts. Altus Dental Insurance Co., Inc. is licensed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

It's your choice.

This new program lets you visit any dentist you choose, however, there are advantages to visiting a dentist who participates with Altus Dental.

To find out if your dentist participates with Altus Dental, visit our web site at www.altusdental.com or call Customer Service at 1-800-722-1148.

Here's how it works:

No matter what dentist you choose to visit, Altus Dental pays a set dollar amount for covered services. You pay the difference between the Altus payment and the dentist's fee.

Certain restrictions apply. Please read the enclosed benefit summary.

If you visit a participating Altus Dental dentist, your out-of-pocket expenses will generally be less, and the dentist will file claims and paperwork on your behalf. We will also pay Altus Dental dentists directly. If you go to a non-Altus dentist, the Altus payment is the same, but you will have to file the claim and pay the dentist.

Whenever you visit the dentist, it's important to discuss what your costs will be in advance of any procedure. That's why we suggest your dentist file a pre-treatment estimate with us for any services expected to cost $300 or more. Pre-treatment estimates are a good way for you to find out what your portion of the bill will be.

To help you better determine what your out-of-pocket costs might be with this new plan, we're enclosing a benefit summary and a payment schedule that highlights some of the most frequently performed dental procedures and what the Altus Dental payment is.

If your dentist is not already in our network, let us know and we'll send him or her information about joining Altus Dental. We encourage you to be a wise consumer and use participating dentists to maximize your new benefit plan.

RE: Certified Mail Packet

Dear Mr. Crapo:

This letter is in regards to the certified mail packet that was received at our office on February 21, 2002. I feel that there may have been some confusion in your sending us this information. We do not have you listed in our system as having worked for the City Of New Bedford, and paying into the New Bedford Retirement System, nor is it clear why this information was sent to us. It appears that you are applying for Veteran's Benefits, something that the New Bedford Retirement system does not deal with. If you could please contact us at (508) 979-1538, so that we may clarify this matter, it would be greatly appreciated. Also. Please note that our address changed. The new address is listed on this letterhead.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Crapo:

Regarding your mother, Mrs. Carolina Thompson, I'm afraid we have nothing good to report. We investigated under the names, Caroline Jennings, Caroline Crapo, and Caroline Thompson. We have no one under any of those names in our alumni files. The Registrar also checked their files and came up empty. All our records at RISD are computerized, however, we maintain back-up manual files. It's conceivable that for some old files, they were never transferred to the computer and the Registrar missed your mother's old files in its search.

Rockwell's painting of her fetches riveting price

Mary Doyle Keefe, 78, poses yesterday at her Nashua, N. H., home with the May 29, 1943, cover of the Saturday Evening Post depicting her face in Norman Rockwell's famous painting, 'Rosie the Riveter.' (He modeled Rosie's body on Michelangelo's 'Isiah'.) At 19, Keefe, who was never a riveter, was paid $10 to sit for what was to become a national symbol during World War II. Sotheby's yesterday auctioned off the painting for $4.9 million — the most ever paid at auction for a Rockwell painting — to an Aspen, Colo., gallery.

Col. Ruby Bradley, heroic nurse was WWII POW

HAZARD, Ky. — Col. Ruby Bradley, an Army nurse who was one of the nation's most decorated female veterans and a World War II prisoner of war, has died at age 94. Col. Bradley had a heart attack last week and died Tuesday, her nephew, Charles Bradley, said.

COL. RUBY BRADLEY

She and other nurses set up a clinic to care for the sick and wounded and to comfort the dying.

She said this year she would never forget the night a U.S. Army tank crashed the camp's gates at the Santo Tomas Internment Camp in Manila, Philippines, freeing her after three years of captivity. "We had heard rumors that American soldiers were close by," she said. "Then, that tank came through. It was the best performance I've ever seen." A native of Spencer, W.Va., Col. Bradley became a nurse in 1933 after a stint as a teacher and joined the Army Nurse Corps as a surgical nurse in 1934.

When the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, she was a 34-year-old administrator serving in the Philippines at Camp John Hay. She was captured three weeks later.

Col. Bradley was moved to Santo Tomas in Manila on Sept. 23, 1943. She was among a group of imprisoned nurses who came to be known to captives as the Angels in Fatigues. Not only did they provide medical treatment for prisoners, but they were adept at stashing food for the children.

ABRONX, a product almost entirely of the first half of the 20th Century, was originally a collection of middle-class neighborhoods clustered around subway stops, a borough where children of immigrants left gloomy Manhattan for the sunlight of wide avenues and the vistas of a city where streets grid-locked to nature's ridges and hills. Different ethnic groups were clustered and there: Irish in Kingsbridge, in the valley between Riverdale and the Grand Concourse; Jews in Bedford Park, north of Fordham University and Bronx Park; well-to-do WASPs and WASPs and WASPs on the palisades above the Hudson River; Jews with less education and advanced union-built apartment complex, with 35-35-story buildings, built in 1965 on marshland from the Hutchinson River Parkway and I-95.

The 17th Congressional District includes much of these Bronx neighborhoods plus several Westchester County suburbs just to the north, Co-op City in one anchor, and perhaps the political bloc in the district. Just to the west is the heavily black, middle-income neighborhood of Williamsbridge. The 17th's portions of Yonkers, Mount Vernon and New Rochelle in Westchester are carefully drawn to include most blacks there. The district also dips south along the Western River to take in some housing projects in the South Bronx. The 17th is, in Young

J.R. Simplot Company, the largest potato processor in the world. In 1972 he was elected to the state House. Otter ran for governor in 1978, finishing third in the Republican primary. He was elected lieutenant governor, and served under three governors until he was elected to Congress. Otter, who is also a wealthy independent ranch owner, believes strongly in gun ownership and property rights. But he is not the social conservative that his predecessor Helen Chenoweth-Hage was. While he opposes abortion, he believes that the government should protect people's lives. He also declined to take a term-limits pledge. He wants to check the power of the Environmental Protection Agency. This isn't a surprise: As a ranch owner, Otter has been fined three times by the EPA for violating the Clean Water Act; the last time he was fined $500,000 for dredging and filling wetlands without a permit. But violating federal environmental regulations is not necessarily the worst offense in Idaho. Otter, who said that his pond-digging was designed to improve the wetlands, responded that he showed he's willing to "stand up for folks in Idaho and a government that is arrogant, intransigent."

In 2000, when Helen Chenoweth-Hage kept her pledge to limit herself to three terms in a venomous Republican primary between Otter and Dennis Mansfield, who founded the right group Idaho Family Forum, ensued. Mansfield's supporters highlighted Otter's drinking conviction in 1993, following which he agreed to perform 72 hours of community service and attend 16 hours of an alcohol treatment program; he apologized and went on a speaking tour of youngsters across Idaho. One of Mansfield's ads stated: "Just what we need in Washington is another bad example for our children." It was later discovered that Mansfield's teenage son had recently pleaded guilty to drug charges. But Otter had the support of most Republican legislators, including Governor Dirk Kempthorne and 29 of 31 state senators. He argued that Washington had usurped the power of local governments, and that states can better make decisions that protect people's lives. He also supports individual investment accounts in Social Security. Mansfield ran as a political outsider, backed term limits and was endorsed by the Wall Street Journal's Club for Growth. In the May primary, Otter won all 19 counties and defeated Mansfield 48% to 31%, with former state Republican chairman Ron McMurray taking 17%. Otter benefited from a get-out-the-vote campaign by the National Rifle Association and local farming and ranching interests, plus a more than 3-1 fundraising advantage. Democrats had some hopes of electing Otter, but their candidate raised little PAC or party money. Otter won 65%-31%.

While running for the House, Otter confessed that he would rather be governor. His term may not be open soon; Kempthorne seems likely to win re-election easily in 2002. Republicans will slice off some of the Boise and Ada County precincts from the 1st district, with no effect on the political balance.

Cook's Call Safe. This district, like the rest of the state, has been trending Republican for the last ten years. Democrats' inability in 1996 or 1998 to knock off Helen Chenoweth, one of the most controversial Republicans in the country, illustrated just how difficult it is for Democrats to make any headway in this district. Don't look for them to spend much time or money here in 2002.

SECOND DISTRICT

The 2nd District of Idaho, from central Boise east to the Snake River, includes 10 counties and towns here are heavily Mormon. It is a conservative community of Sun Valley, celebrities and high-end development with soaring costs, where Idaho is part of the Mormon heartland. Some counties and towns here are heavily Mormon and sometimes votes for Democrats; Sun Valley 220 votes; and the 2d's portion of the Snake River 220 votes. The other whole counties in the 2nd District are George W. Bush.

The 2nd District Congressman from the 2d District is Mike Crapo. Mike Crapo was elected to the Senate. His father's practice there and was elected to the Senate. He didn't declare himself as a Republican. In 1993 he became speaker, but kept himself known as a moderate in a conservative district. He pushed the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday tax relief. When Governor Phil Batt was elected to run for his office. But Senator Dirk Kempthorne Then 2d District Congressman, Mike Crapo, ran for the 2d District race. His elevation to the House required some legislative Representative Mark Stubbs and Mike Stubbs for lower payroll taxes; Stubbs Nation Engineering and Environmental Laboratory in the 1980s, while Simpson wanted to work at the facility. But the big issue was term limits. Simpson refused to take US Term to pledge to serve only three terms, the other three did. Americans for Term Limits spent to run TV ads against Simpson. Enraged by these ads, Governor Phil Batt endorsed Simpson days before the election. Simpson ran ads against "outsiders" and "out-of-state folk," recorded a message for him which was delivered to 47,000 households by telemarketing. Simpson beat Stubbs, 47%-41%. The Democratic nominee was Richard Stallings, a former hunter who was elected to the House in 1984 and re-elected three times; in 1992 he ran against Kemp for the Senate and lost; 57%-43%. Stallings talked about his conservative voting record in the House, called for more education spending and pointed with anxiety at falling farm commodity prices. Simpson wanted a smaller federal role in education; he favored tax cuts and Republican Social Security reform. As farm prices plummeted, Simpson called for trade talks to open markets with possible tariffs if others didn't go along, and renegotiating NAFTA. Simpson won 53% of the vote, losing the most visible parts of the district—Pocatello, Sun Valley, Boise—but carrying everything else, and in the Mormon southeast and ultracconservative northeast by comfortable margins.

In the House, Simpson dedicated much of his first two years to building relationships with his 434 colleagues—preferably, he said, in one-on-one informal conversations. But he did not know all of them—the House is a big place—and that reinforced his opposition to term limits. More than most western Republicans, he has reached out to Democrats on economic and social issues. "Sometimes we get a little too partisan," he told the Idaho Statesman at the end of his first term, complaining that greater willingness to compromise would have permitted enactment of tax cuts. Although he was the only Idahoan to vote for the emergency appropriations bill in 1999 to pay for the military operation in Kosovo, he urged President Clinton to accelerate the process to remove United States troops. Despite his call for a middle ground on resource issues, Simpson endorsed a prohibition on breaching dams along the Columbia and Snake Rivers. He criticized Clinton for acting unilaterally to expand the Craters of the Moon National Monument and filed a bill to prevent similar actions.

Simpson had an easier time winning in 2000 than in 1998. His Democratic opponent required Air Force fighter pilot trainer, refused campaign contributions and relied on the radio to get his message out. It evidently didn't get far: Simpson won 71%-26%. Redistricting added more of Boise and Ada County to the 2d District, but will not change the political balance materially.

Cook's Call Safe. In 1998, when Democrats ran their best possible candidate for the House, Rep. Richard Stallings, it became clear just how Republican Idaho is: In what elsewhere is a good year for Democrats, they still came up short. Simpson should be able to hold onto the seat for as long as he wants it.

SIXTEENTH DISTRICT

El Paso, Texas, and Juarez, Mexico, face each other across the narrow Rio Grande, their shaded streets spread out below the rough brown face of Comanche Peak, two border cities surrounded by hundreds of miles of some of North America's most rugged and desolate landscape. 400 miles from Phoenix and 600 from Dallas-Fort Worth. There is much history here. It claims the first Thanksgiving took place in San Elizario near El Paso in 1598, and there were Spanish conquistadors coming through the pass of the north, El Paso del Norte, years before. In the 1950s, El Paso and Juarez each had a population of 140,000, now the U.S. Census counts 679,000 in El Paso and estimates are that some 1.4 million live in and around Juarez. A bilingual, bicultural pair of cities, where most people have a Mexican heritage, the thrust of which comes from the fertile union of a Spanish speaking people and an English-speaking people. El Paso is one of the lowest-wage cities in the U.S., Juarez one of the highest-wage in Mexico. maquiladora plants pioneered a cross-border economy and the NAFTA strengthened it, but not all low-skill either; there is a big General Motors technical center, south of the border.

But free trade doesn't necessarily mean porous borders. In September 1993, El Paso's migration and Naturalization Service leader Silvestre Reyes started Operation Hold the Line, positioning 400 officers on the border instead of trying to intercept illegals after they had crossed into El Paso (amazingly enough, that had been firmly-rooted INS policy). Mexico complained about threats to its sovereignty, merchants worried about loss of sales, a few hampered about funding domestic help. But in El Paso auto thefts were down 30%, burglaries and robberies were down, beggars were absent from the streets, fewer Mexicans were having heart attacks in El Paso hospitals; the move was almost universally popular north of the border and was accepted to the south. The law finally was being enforced by an agency that had long been impossible; Californians began asking why the INS couldn't hold the line in their state.

The 16th Congressional District of Texas is made up of most of the city of El Paso and communities along the Rio Grande, and giant Fort Bliss to the north. A full 78% of the population here are Latino. For many years politics divided people on ethnic lines, with most Anglo and Mexican and Llanos Democratic. El Paso feels distant from the rest of Texas; it is even in a different time zone. During his first four years as governor, George W. Bush paid close attention to the area and in 1998 he earned El Paso County 50%-49%—a considerable achievement given the overwhelmingly Latino electorate. In 2000, when he ran for president, Bush lost the county to Gore, but still won a respectable 40%.

The congressman from the 16th District is Silvestre Reyes, who was elected as a Democrat in 1996. He grew up on a farm in Canutillo, five miles north of El Paso, the oldest of 10 children. He went to college in El Paso and Austin. He served in the Army in Vietnam, then "took a year of civil service tests as I could, and the Border Patrol called" in 1969. He worked for the INS in cities in Texas and Glynco, Georgia, and returned to El Paso in 1993 as chief patrol agent. When he got there he found that "people could basically cross the border at any time, whenever they wanted to." More than 40 boatmen ran "what were essentially international ferries" with illegals crossing the border every day. By instituting his Operation Hold the Line against the wishes of many border agents eager to get credit for apprehending aliens, he reduced the number of crossings to less than half. By November 1995 Reyes's name recognition was 65%, higher than most congressional candidates; he resigned from the INS and started running for Congress as a Democrat.

Reyes talked of the need for integrity and common sense. His target was Ron Coleman, a Democrat first elected in 1982, around whom scandals lurked: he had 673 overdrafts at a bank, he was accused by Texas Attorney General Dan Morales on 60 Minutes of trying to get a prosecution of a local developer. In December 1995 Coleman announced he was retiring. Reyes legislative assistant for 13 years, John Law Sanchez, ran with backing from Coleman's supporters. Sanchez harshly attacked Reyes as a crypto-Republican, pointing out that his treasurer had worked for Republicans in the past and that he had the support of Reyes's former Mayor Jonathan Rogers, and criticizing Reyes for backing a capital gains tax cut. Sanchez mailing read, "Two of a kind: Gungnch and Reyes." Reyes hewed to his moderate form, calling for water conservation research, a capital gains tax cut, promoting highmittee to try to require credit bureaus to let people talk with live operators and to provide consumers with a free copy of their credit report after information is corrected. In 1997 she complained about the lack of Hispanic appointees in the Clinton Administration. She tried to give the INS the discretion to make exceptions to the draconian requirement that all immigrants must be deported for any crimes, no matter how trivial or how long ago they were committed. She was a sponsor of the Clinton administration proposals to stop money laundering in 1999, and Republican James Talent she helped pass a bill creating 40 new renewal zones eligible for job breaks in 2000.

Since 1998, Velazquez has been ranking Democrat on the Small Business Committee. Velazquez sponsored studies that showed that small businesses' share of federal contracts fell from $6.4 billion in 1997 to $4.9 billion in 1999. In response she sponsored a bill which passed the House easily to closely monitor contract bundling—federal agencies' practice of putting small contracts together in one large package, which usually results in the contract going to a large business. Among the 2 million minority-owned and 9 million woman-owned businesses, she spoke out for repeal of the estate tax in June 2000 and voted for it. But when Bill Clinton vetoed the bill, she voted to uphold his veto after a phone call from him. She has worked on district projects including a $1.6 million grant in 2000 for education and housing for the homeless and a new post office in Bushwick, which opened in August 2000.

Velazquez has been a major voice on issues relating to Puerto Rico. She used to favor independence, a cause favored by less than 5% of voters in Puerto Rico; by 1997 she favored the continuation of the current commonwealth status (more accurately, described in the Spanish as estado libre asociado, free associated state). She attacked the March 1998 bill setting terms for a referendum on status—always the number one issue in Puerto Rico—as "a one-sided bill that is biased in favor of Puerto Rican statehood" that shows "a lack of respect for the people of Puerto Rico." She said its definition of commonwealth was biased, because it did not guarantee U.S. citizenship to future generations of Puerto Ricans (citizenship is now based on the Fourteenth Amendment, but on a law passed by Congress in 1917, which could be repealed). She has strongly opposed the Navy's bombing range on the island of Vieques and in May 2000 she was one of more than 200 protesters evicted from Vieques, along with Illinois Congressman Luis Guterrez. Velazquez strongly advocated clemency for members of the FALN terrorist group, which was responsible for the deaths of six people—who had been imprisoned for 19 years after being convicted on seditious conspiracy and weapons charges and had not expressed regret. Bill Clinton granted clemency in August 1999 conditioned on a renunciation of violence. She said that the clemency should have been unconditional. When the grant was opposed by Hillary Clinton, then contemplating a run for the Senate, Velazquez said she should have fought the community and listened to the people: she was dismayed when the House condemned clemency by a 311-41 vote. After violence during New York's Puerto Rican Day parade in 2000, she said, "I am outraged. Some bad apples have tarnished the reputation of the beautiful New York community."

Velazquez called the ruling overturning the old 12th District lines in 1997 "a denial of equal justice for communities of color." But it did not turn out to be a sad political drama. Brooklyn Democratic Chairman Clarence Norman sought candidates to run against her but failed. In 2000 Velazquez did have primary opposition, but won with 77% of the vote. New York City's big increases in the Hispanic population in the 1990s will make it easier for redistricting to create a heavily or majority Hispanic district based in Brooklyn than it was 10 years ago. In the 2000 Census, Queens had a much higher Hispanic population than Brooklyn. This suggests the bulk of the new Hispanic district will be in Queens, especially if the 7th district represented by Joseph Crowley is eliminated. Nor does this guarantee Velazquez a safe seat. Few of the corners, especially in Queens, are Puerto Rican and share her preoccupation with Puerto Rican issues.

Cook's Call: Safe. Minor line changes here in 1997 had little impact on Velazquez. She has continued to win this seat easily. This heavily Democratic district will never give her much trouble. Redistricting will alter the lines here again somewhat, as this district had picked up about 30,000 people in redistricting.

Barbara J.

Armistead

Homemaker

Barbara J. (Jones) Armistead died
May 17, 2002, at Mt. Auburn Hospital in Cambridge. She was 78.

Armistead was born in Cambridge and was a lifelong resident. She graduated from Emmanuel College and was a homemaker.

She was involved in civic and community affairs. She was one of the founding members of the Tobin School Community Board and served on many other community boards in Cambridge. She was also involved in politics in the city and was an active Democrat.

She was the wife of the late Lewis
A. Armistead and mother of Lewis
A. Jr. of Providence, R.I.; David A. of Woburn, Daniel W. and his wife
Carol Foltz of Nahick, and Mary A. and Barbara L. (both of Cambridge).

A funeral Mass was held May 21 at St. Paul's Church in Cambridge, with burial at Mt. Auburn Cemetery.
Arrangements were made by the Hickey Funeral Home in Cambridge.

Donations in Mrs. Armistead's memory may be made to the Dana-
Farber Cancer Institute Jimmy Fund,
1309 Beacon St., Brookline, MA
02446.

Dear Ms. Edelman:

I am writing on behalf of Barbara Burrell regarding her application for Section 8 housing.

Ms. Burrell is currently the legal guardian of her niece and nephew, both of whom were severely neglected by their natural parents. Ms. Burrell fought for 2 years for custody of these children so they could have a good home. However, Mrs. Burrell lives on Social Security Disability in a small, 1 bedroom apartment and has no financial resources with which to secure a larger apartment. The children, ages 8 and 3, are very active and need more space than they have.

Ms. Burrell has looked actively for 2 years for a larger apartment with no luck. Her financial resources are minimal and her ability to be a good parent is seriously impaired by the stress of living in such a small space. Because of their past history, the children need good parenting more than most, and need to be in an apartment that is conducive to this.

I hope that you review favorably her application for housing.

Please call me at 321-0130 if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

Carol S Mamber

Dear Mr. Crapo:

Thank you for your recent request for information on obtaining the MBTA Senior Photo ID Pass. Upon turning 65 you may obtain your pass either in person or by mail.

To obtain your pass in person, please go to the Senior and Access Pass Program office located at Back Bay Station (Orange Line). The Pass Program office is located next to the AMTRAK ticket window on the main concourse. You will need to bring with you proof of age, and $.50 cents. Staff will take your photo and issue you the pass immediately.

If you would like to obtain your senior pass by mail please send $.50 cents, a 1" x 1" Photo and proof of age to the Pass Program at the following address:

Senior and Access Pass Program
Back Bay Station
145 Dartmouth Street
Boston, Ma 02116

For further instruction on obtaining your Senior Photo ID by mail, please see the attached instructions.

Again, thank you for taking the time to write to us with your request. Should you have any additional questions, please feel free to contact Matt Whalen, Supervisor of the Senior and Access Pass Program at (617) 222-2071.

Sincerely,

Michael H. Mulhern
General Manager

DEAR Mr. Crapo,

WE MISSED YOU!

We are sorry you were unable to keep your appointment with DR. Cynthia Grosskreutz on 6/4/02 (today).

Because glaucoma is a silent disease and usually has no symptoms, it is important to be examined by a physician on a regular basis to determine whether your eyes are stable or if you need your treatment adjusted.

The Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary Glaucoma Consultation Service is open Monday through Friday 8:00 to 4:30. Please call us at (617) 573-3670 to reschedule your appointment.

Thank you.

MEMORY BANK EXERCISE

I remember that hot humid summer day. I heard my grandpa honk his horn and I flew from the kitchen table out the screen door. I heard it slam rather hard behind me as I jumped from the porch missing two or three steps. My grandpa had an old rusted dodge pick-up he used for worken on the orchards. I muscled around with the handle trying to get myself in, not having much luck, my grandpa reached over to give me a hand but before he could, I climbed through the window making a perfect landing. I had worked up such a sweat; my bare legs were sticking to the vinyl seat covering. He leaned over and patted me on the head and said, "that's my girl". I might have been a small ten-year old but I was evincible!

We were headed off to spend the day working in the orchards. I was to be my granddads assistant, tasked to whack down all of the entangled weeds that had overcome the apple trees. I don't think I quite realized how much work it was going to be. But as soon as my grandpa handed me my own machete, none of that really matter. I quickly transformed into a fearless sorcerer ready to battle the dragons! I tied my hair back into a ponytail, wiped the sweat from forehead, and headed out. I waked and swung, and waked and swung, aligning my tip precisely on target. It was as if I was in a graceful dueling match. Then suddenly, my rhythm came to a complete halt! My sword seemed to be stuck.

JACKIE

Though I tugged and tugged, with all of my might, I couldn't seem to free it. I could feel the wetness of my palms loosening the grip the bonded me to the handle, my arms began to tremble, and the salty beads of sweat that lined my forehead slowly burned my eyes. Wanting badly to wipe them, I refused to free

JUNE SEVENTH (07th) Year 2002 THE BOSTON HERALD

Jury awards $500G to postal worker over retaliation

A federal jury yesterday awarded $500,000 to a black U.S. postal clerk who testified she endured eight years of humiliating harassment in Boston and was fired after she got the nerve to complain to federal civil rights officials.

The blame, postal culture, she said, was hers. She said she got a reputation for being "tough" and "not in for the long haul" when she went on strike in 1997. Her union representative, Torney Matthew Cobb, who represented Candy M. Bell, a single mother in her 30s, said that Bell wore head-phones to avoid "bully" name-calling from male and female co-workers. The jury found the Postal Service retaliated against Bell in 1997 after she filed a discrimination claim with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Soon after she lodged the complaint, her bosses ordered her to submit to a "fitness for duty" exam and suspended her for 14 days. She also received a letter in August, 1997, saying she was fired.

"All of a sudden she's not in for duty" and she was a "contaminated" course for removal, Cobb said. Bell, however, is still employed as a postal clerk outside Boston. Defense attorneys pointed out that Bell was not even aware she filed an EEO claim, said attorney Barbara Healy Smith, who represented the government.

The perpetrators always denied the postal worker's complaints, Cobb said. Bell finally went to the EEOC with their story after co-workers delayed relaying an emergency message regarding her emergency son, according to Cobb.

"That was the pivotal thing," he said. While the jury heard evidence of the alleged harassment of Bell, they were asked to rule only on her claims of retaliation.

The harassment incidents took place too long ago to go to the jury under administrative rules. The government will ask U.S. District Court Judge Robert B. Colliers to throw out the award.

"There was no evidence that award of this size," Healy Smith said. The jury's verdict surpasses the $300,000 maximum allowed for winning federal laws for must be reduced.

Jurors reached their verdict at 1 p.m. yesterday after seven hours of deliberations over two days.

The trial began May 28. The whole case was about the Post Office's zero-tolerance policy against discrimination and it," Cobb said.

Tidbits & Outrages

SECURING THE "GREEN" VOTE

Dark-horse presidential candidate Gov. Howard Dean (D-Vt.) hasn't yet been asked whether or not he inhaled, but supporters of medical marijuana are pressuring him with a poll showing that 70 percent of voters in New Hampshire—the site of the first presidential primary—support medical marijuana legislation.

TOM DELAY'S COLLEGE RANKINGS

Rep. Tom DeLay (R-Texas) recently urged an audience at a Texas Baptist church to "throw the P.C. out and bring God in" when choosing colleges for their children. DeLay singled out Baylor University and Texas A&M University—both notably conservative schools—as unacceptable choices because each refuses to teach creationism.

LICENSED TO KILL

French authorities recently instituted a 24-hour cooling-off period—not for buying a gun, but for releasing results of a driver's exam. According to Reuters, more than two-thirds of the country's 3.5 million learners fail their driving test, leading many to attack—often at gunpoint—examiners who fail them.

OBESE POLICE

Florida donut shops may soon be conspicuously short of cops, in an effort to trim down its troopers the state highway patrol has declared officers more than 15 pounds over weight to be ineligible for the state's new $500 bonuses.

MEDIA MALPRACTICE?

"This is my diagnosis as a medical doctor. Arafat will not be around very much longer. And I doubt he has the mental capability to be around presently." —Rep. John Cooksey (R-La.)—an ophthalmologist.

Raised Leg Crunches

Lie flat on your back with your knees bent and lower legs supported by a bench or chair. Your thighs should be at 90 degrees to the mat. Tilt the head forward to 45 degrees and hold your hands at your temples or cupped behind the ears. This is the starting position. Slowly crunch forward, breathing out as you do so, then slowly move back to the starting position while breathing in. Repeat, but don't relax between reps.

⚠ Never pull on your neck during a crunch. Doing so may injure your neck or upper back.

Bench Crunches

Works upper, lower, and oblique abs.

1 Sit on the narrow end of a bench with feet flat on the floor, hands grasping the sides of the bench. Lean your torso back about 45 degrees and raise your feet a few inches off the floor, keeping knees slightly bent.

2 Bring your upper body to an upright position while pulling your knees into your chest. Hold for a second, then return both the upper and the lower body to the starting position. Do 2 sets of 10.

Nuts to Torrey

There is a very good reason why California law prohibits the incarceration of mental patients ("Hippie Healthcare Policy," by E. Fuller Torrey, April 2002). Mental illness is not a crime. In the nominal case, that is how it should be. Medication, hospitalization, and prison are all forms of societal treatment. All should require due process on behalf of the accused.

It is a serious matter to judge someone unfit to make their own decisions. Yet doctors continue to argue for this exemplary power that even judges and elected officials do not have. An accusation of murder affords a certain set of rights. Yet the author seems to argue that an accusation of depressive, schizophrenic, or suicidal behavior should afford even fewer rights than this.

The author makes some very good points as to how the CMHS is running amok with a very large federal grant. However, his underlying thesis rests on the assumption that people who eat from garbage cans should be medicated as a matter of course. That is the 1950s' mindset, and in this context, it is not at all clear why the 1960s anti-establishment view is any less relevant today.

MICHAEL SHURPIK
Cambridge, Mass.

E. Fuller Torrey would have Washington Monthly readers believe that large numbers of people with mental illness don't get needed treatment because state legislatures won't enact tougher forcible-treatment laws. In contrast, the U.S. Surgeon General's definitive Report on Mental Health highlights the formidable financial barriers that profoundly limit people's access to needed mental healthcare. Yet Torrey would recklessly slash the modest funding provided the single federal agency dedicated to improving the quality and availability of mental health services, the Center for Mental Health Services (CMHS), because the agency doesn't subscribe to his dogma.

Torrey displays loose or highly selective regard for fact in attacking those who reject his anachronistic views. I take particular exception to his mischaracterization of the National Mental Health Association (NMHA) and its advocacy work. As the oldest, largest nonprofit organization addressing all aspects of mental health and mental illness, NMHA has aggressively and successfully supported federal funding for mental health programs for over 90 years—long before CMHS was created. Our view has been, and remains, that the federal investment in mental health and prevention and treatment of mental illness is grossly inadequate.

We are but one of over 300 CMHS grantees. NMHA also vigorously lobbies Congress on behalf of other agencies and departments which provide it no funds. NMHA is proud of the successful work it has done with support from CMHS, for example, creating a National Consumer Supporter Technical Assistance Center (NMHA put up nearly $80,000 to match the CMHS's 1998 grant of $250,000). We are proud to be a voice—across a broad spectrum of federal programs and departments—for people with or at risk of mental illness and substance abuse disorders.

MICHAEL FAENZA
President and CEO National Mental Health Association, Alexandria, Va.

Dr. Torrey replies: The issue that underlies the letter by Mr. Shurpik is whether individuals with severe psychiatric disorders are competent to make decisions about their own care. Multiple studies have shown that approximately half of them have significantly impaired awareness of their illness because of brain dysfunction and thus may not be competent. Would the writers also defend the rights of individuals with Alzheimer's disease to eat from garbage cans and to "debate the issues in order to reach a consensus"? When treatment must be imposed, it should, of course, be done with extensive checks to prevent abuses.

The issue that underlies Mr. Faenza's letter is simpler. As a major beneficiary of the federal faucet under attack, he would understandably like to see the funds continue to flow.

(Male artists and scholars have, over the centuries, made a habit of appropriating the work of talented women or attributing it to men.) Once scholars did identify significant women artists, they had to demonstrate that those artists met the male standards for admission to the canon—i.e., they had to suffer and be mostly ignored during their lifetimes. This being the male canon, it was also helpful if the emerging female artists were beautiful and had glamorous friends.

Kahlo made a perfect candidate. She didn't lop off an ear, but Kahlo had a horrific story. In 1925, when she was 18, she was riding a bus in Mexico City when it was struck by a trolley car. A metal handrail pierced her abdomen, exiting through her vagina. Her spinal column was broken in three places. Her collarbone, some ribs, and her pelvis were broken, and her right leg was fractured in 11 places. Her foot was dislocated and crushed. No one thought she would live, much less walk again, but, after a month in the hospital, she went home. Encased for months in plaster body casts, Kahlo began to paint lying in bed with a special easel rigged up by her mother. With the help of a mirror, Kahlo began painting her trademark subject: herself. Of the 150 or so of her works that have survived, most are self-portraits. As she later said, "I paint myself because I am so often alone, because I am the subject I know best."

As if her bodily injuries weren't compelling enough, Kahlo's drama—as well as her art—was enhanced by what she referred to as the second accident in her life: Diego Rivera, the famous Mexican muralist to whom she was married for 25 years. Rivera was a notorious womanizer, a habit he did not abandon after marrying Kahlo, his third wife. Legend has it that for American women traveling to Mexico, having sex with Rivera was considered as essential as visiting Tenochtitlan. The 300-pound Rivera even had an affair with Kahlo's sister Christina. (Kahlo, in turn, had her own affairs with men and women.)

Both Kahlo and Rivera were active in the Communist Party and Mexican politics. More importantly, when Kahlo met Rivera, he was a leading proponent of a post-revolutionary movement known as Mexicanidad, which rejected Western European influences and the "easel art" of the aristocracy in favor of all things considered "authentically" Mexican, such as peasant handicrafts and pre-Columbian art. Kahlo also became a diehard adherent, adopting her now-famous traditional Mexican costumes—long skirts and dresses, which also had the practical effect of covering up her polio-withered leg. Rejecting, too, conventional standards of beauty, Kahlo not only didn't pluck her unibrow or mustache, she groomed them with special tools and even penciled them darker.

Likewise, her paintings, rooted in 19th-century Mexican portraiture, ingeniously incorporated elements of Mexican pop culture and pre-Columbian primitivism that, in the 1930s, had never been done before. Usually small, intimate paintings that contrasted with the grand mural tradition of her time, her work was often done on sheet metal rather than canvas, in the style of Mexican street artists who painted retablos, or small votive paintings that offer thanks to the Virgin Mary or a saint for a miraculous deliverance from misfortune.

The paintings often reflect her tumultuous relationship with Rivera, as well as the anguish of her ever-

Zone Defense

*Drug-free school zones were supposed to keep dealers away from kids.
But what happens when the zones engulf whole cities?*

BY JOHN GOULD

IN THE SPRING OF 1997, DEMATRIC YOUNG was living at the Sunset Motel just off Highway 84 in North Lubbock, Texas. The Sunset is run-down place in a mainly Hispanic neighborhood and home to a constantly shifting roster of semi-permanent guests—low income, down-on-their-luck types, often a step away from the homeless shelter. From his room there, on two occasions, Young sold an undercover narcotics agent somewhere between two and four grams—around $400 worth—of cocaine. The normal sentence in the state of Texas for such a crime would have been around ten years. But Young discovered that he would be facing a much harsher sentence, because, unbeknown to him, his motel room was located in a “drug-free school zone.”

According to Texas state law, everywhere within 1,000 feet of a school constitutes a “drug-free zone.” Anyone convicted of selling or possessing drugs within such a zone is subject to an enhanced sentence—a five-year mandatory minimum over and above the sentence imposed for the original offense. Unfortunately for Young, the Sunset was within 1,000 feet of Cavazos Junior High School. He was never accused of selling drugs to children. Nor did he ever set foot inside the Cavazos schoolyard. But under the Texas drug-free school zone law, neither of these facts is relevant.

Texas law also requires that Young be tried separately for each charge, once for possession of cocaine and additionally for sales of cocaine within a drug-free school zone. And it requires that any sentences be served consecutively rather than concurrently. As a result, Young—20 at the time of his arrest—is now serving a 38-year sentence, ineligible for parole until at least 2021. “His life is over,” says his lawyer, Bob Huddleston.

There’s little reason to expect that the Texas politicians who created the state’s drug-free zone laws would have much sympathy for Young, given that the crime he was convicted of corresponds perfectly with the law they wrote. But even the most tough-on-crime legislators might question whether the intention of a law designed to keep drug dealers away from school children is being well served by the imposition of a massive extra penalty on someone who was not selling to kids, who was nowhere near them, and who was essentially operating out of his home.

All together, drug-free zone laws rank among the country’s most specious criminal drug statutes. Over the years, states have created so many of these zones, of such immense scope, that they now encompass almost the entirety of some cities, rendering them overwhelmingly ineffective. Yet, drug-free zoning has hardly been inconsequential. It has helped send countless low-level drug offenders in inner cities—most of them minorities like Young, who’s black—to prison for much longer terms than those committing the same crimes in the suburbs, where drug-free zones occupy a dramatically smaller fraction of the overall space. At a time when Americans are increasingly questioning the fairness of drug laws that disproportionately affect minorities—as with the vastly higher penalties associated with crack versus powdered implementation. Instead, while use among high-school students did decrease for virtually every type of illicit drug over the course of the '80s—reaching a low around 1992—this decrease had already started by the time the zone laws took effect. Since 1992, levels of drug use have slightly increased.

"Drug-free zones sound tough-minded and reassuring," says Naomi Murakawa, co-director of A Better Way Foundation, a Connecticut-based drug-policy research group. "But they're really neither, because what they're trying to deal with is a highly mobile black-market commodity, and it's just not possible to create a public zone that's genuinely free of something like that.

Even if drug-free zone laws haven't reduced adolescent drug use or created zones that are actually drug-free, they should have at least pushed drug sales away from schools, right? But a recent study conducted through Boston University's School of Public Health by Will Brownsberger, a lecturer at B.U. and Harvard, found no evidence that that's the case.

Having mapped out an extensive sample-set of "school-zone" dealing arrests in Massachusetts, Brownsberger found that drug dealing is actually denser inside the zones than it is outside. What's more, within the 1,000-foot radius of the zones, there is no decrease in the density of arrests as you move toward points on the maps closer to schools—that is, drug-free school zones don't seem to deter drug dealers. In high-poverty areas of Springfield during fiscal 1999, for example, Brownsberger's study shows that areas within 250 feet of schools had a density of 44 dealing arrests per square mile, while the density in areas 750 to 1,000 feet distant was only 31. The data aren't conclusive, of course, given that no one tracked the arrests before drug-free zones existed, but they're hardly reassuring.

Logic-Free Zone

The Brownsberger study illustrates how the design of "drug-free zones" is systematically at odds with its intent. For one thing, it's often difficult for anyone to know that he or she is in a drug-free zone. What signs there are only indicate the zones without demarcating them. So someone can easily be 1,000 feet from the nearest drug-free zone indicator and yet be inside the zone.

"It's a great departure from reality to ascribe that level of knowledge to the vast majority of defendants facing 'school zone' charges," says James Fagan, a Democratic member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives and a former assistant district attorney, who has worked as a criminal defense lawyer since 1977. "The average client who gets caught in these zones is an unsophisticated, low-level guy."

It's confusing enough to figure out where the zones begin and where they end when they're sparsely located, as they tend to be in suburban neighborhoods. But in inner cities, where most drug-free zones are found, the zones tend to intersect with one another, creating oddly-shaped, overlapping entities, immensely confusing to people on the street. And often, inner-city drug-free zones aren't only irregular; they're huge. No matter where they're located, each is a big circle, 2,000 to 3,000 feet across—the length of six to 10 football fields. And that's where state laws follow the standard 1,000 to 1,500 foot definition. In Missouri, the radius is 2,000 feet; in Kentucky, 1,000 yards; in South Carolina, half a mile; and in Alabama, a stunning three miles.

In urban neighborhoods, the sheer number and concentration of public schools and other designated places create dense and extensive sets of overlapping territories that effectively block off entire swaths of city centers as massive drug-free "school" zones. As Fagan notes, "In the city of Boston, it's virtually impossible not to be within 1,000 feet of a school."

While a slight exaggeration, Fagan's claim is not far off the mark—not only for Boston but for most American cities. In the high-poverty urban areas studied for Brownsberger's report, for example, a full 56 percent of the overall area was within the boundaries of a drug-free zone. A Congressional Research Service study of such areas in the District of Columbia, requested by Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy in 1995, estimated that at least 60 percent of the city fell into a drug-free zone. In New Haven, Conn., the only extensive space that's not part of one is the Yale golf course. In urban areas, drug-free zones often take up more space than they leave.

What this means is that the default assumption for urban drug dealers is that they are, at any given time, probably in a drug-free zone. It doesn't take a game theorist to realize that the more this assumption gets made, the less effective the laws will be. Besides the laws simply fail to account for the way in which drug dealers actually behave. As a general rule, low-level dealers conduct business close to where they live. And, as Brownsberger's study demonstrates, is, as long as they help put drug dealers away. But the use of drug-free zone laws as case-management tools by prosecutors and police has at least one systematic and very troubling side effect: It creates a stark bias against inner cities and their largely poor, largely minority, residents.

These laws overly target poor African-Americans and Hispanics, not on the basis of drug trade involvement per se, but purely on the basis of where they live.

most people charged on drug-free zone violations end up being simply those who live within them. Neither are most of those people actually selling to kids. Eighty percent of the cases Brownsberger studied occurred within a drug-free zone, but less than one percent involved sales to minors.

Advocates nevertheless defend zone-based sentencing laws as providing important "tools" for law enforcement. Bridget Brennan, New York City's special narcotics prosecutor, tellingly admits that she doesn't know the intent of drug-free zone laws. Brennan assumes, upon reflection, that they're meant to dissuade dealers, but says frankly that they have no such effect. What they do—and this is what she likes about them—is give prosecutors the option to go for a stiffer penalty "if appropriate."

But the "appropriateness" which Brennan invokes is strictly a prosecutor's criterion. And, as it turns out, most zone-based charges actually end up being broken down, which means that they're used to get the defendant to plead to lesser charges so as to avoid the mandatory minimum. What's more, Brownsberger found that the decisions prosecutors make on whether to break charges down aren't influenced at all by the proximity of an arrest to a school, nor by whether or not classes were actually in and kids were around. Fagan notes a similar disjuncture in the way drug-free zones give discretion to arresting officers: "I've had cases where the police have literally followed a car for miles in order to stop the guy in a school zone, even though it was two in the morning."

Neighborhood Profiling

A case could be made that, in the end, it doesn't matter what the intent of zone-based sentencing laws

The virtual omnipresence of urban drug-free zones mean that defendants living in densely populated areas are much more likely to face zone-based charges—and much more likely to be sentenced, and to be sentenced for longer—for the same crimes committed by relatively wealthy, disproportionately white, suburbanites.

In Connecticut, for instance, cities whose populations are one-third black or Hispanic have 525 drug-free zones per square mile. Towns where minorities make up less than 10 percent of the population have only 48 zones per square mile, according to a recent study by A Better Way Foundation's Sarah Bray. In other words, these laws overly target poor African-Americans and Hispanics, not on the basis of involvement in the drug trade per se, but purely on the basis of where they live.

There is also, unfortunately, evidence of conspicuous racial inconsistencies in decisions on whether or not to charge defendants with drug-free zone violations—particularly on whether or not to charge them with "intent to distribute" within a zone, which is typically determined by the quantity of the drug in a suspect's possession. In 1998, Deborah Ramirez of the Northeastern University Law School and Jack McDevitt, co-director of Northeastern's Center for Criminal Justice Policy Research, conducted a study to determine whether non-whites (for their purposes, blacks and Hispanics) were more or less likely to face "school zone" charges than whites. Among their results: 41 percent of non-whites in possession of less than one-eighth of a gram of cocaine were charged with intent, compared to only 11 percent of whites in possession of the same amount. For amounts over a gram and a half, 94 percent of non-whites were charged but only 26 percent of whites.

Few things poison race relations in America today more than the differential sentencing of white and black or Hispanic people who commit essentially the same crimes. As Judge Robert Mulligan of the Norfolk, Mass., Superior Court observes, the main social effect of these zones is to breed "tremendous cyni-

Al Gore, out of disappointment over the moderate scandals of the Clinton administration, short-sightedly chose principle over practicality. Underlying the whole sad story is a guiding principle that has gotten all but lost in this polarized society: Sometimes, compromising is the right thing to do. Compromise, Pertschuk writes, takes more courage than continuing to fight and argue. Sometimes fighters have to raise their heads above the fray and remind themselves of who the enemy actually is.

He quotes Jim Tierney, the folksy former Maine attorney general who served as an adviser to the states' tobacco suits: "I believe the fight against the tobacco industry is as addictive as nicotine itself. The very best of public advocates, often in deep personal pain from the loss of a loved one to the deadly cancer marketed so callously by the tobacco industry, were addicted to the fight."

As a reporter who covered this train wreck, I confess that it was heartbreaking to see so much come to so little. As the child of a political family who grew up in the progressive "half-a-loaf" tradition, it just pissed me off. Practicing "half-a-loaf" politics means actually fighting to win, even incremental battles, instead of striking an inspiring pose. Lyndon Johnson understood the rightness of getting things done. Johnson repeatedly weakened the Civil Rights Act of 1957 until liberals were in a rage, but he knew that this bill could pave the way for stronger measures. As Johnson's biographer Robert A. Caro has written, Johnson knew "that the most important thing wasn't what was in the bill. The most important thing was that there be a bill." Or, as Johnson crudely put it, "Once you break the virginity, it'll be easier next time."

Since then, politics has polarized to the point that people disdain it and don't want to get their hands dirty. Content with the beauty of purity, no one ever has to take the blame for failure. Instead, the fighters stand there in the echo chamber, hollering and admiring the sound of their own voices. The real question for advocates and those looking to make real change for the better is deciding when to cut a deal and when to holler—and not just do one or the other all the time. Pertschuk would say that the anti-tobacco movement—and, by implication, many others—has gotten stuck on holler. And it's hard to disagree.

"Broken Homes"

The New York Times, April 28-30, 2002

For this three-part series exposing neglect and malfeasance at private homes for the mentally ill in New York City, Clifford J. Levy waded through more than 5,000 pages of state inspection reports, performed 200 interviews with workers, residents, and family members, and made more than three dozen visits to homes where 946 residents (326 of them under 60) died between 1995 and 2001. The resulting series paints an appalling picture of squalid living conditions and sordid mistreatment. Levy chronicles hundreds of suicides and unaccounted deaths, workers' falsification of records, residents prostituting themselves and selling drugs from their rooms, patients given the wrong drugs by ill-trained workers, and thousands of dollars of unnecessary procedures performed on residents and charged to the state. Levy's work exposes the broken system that allows for-profit homes to manage and house the mentally ill with little or no government scrutiny.

Newton doc fined for lack of insurance

The state medical board has fined and reprimanded a Newton psychiatrist for failing to carry malpractice insurance.

Dr. Minda R. Shankman, who practices pediatric psychiatry, was fined $1,500 for failing to have insurance for a period of about a month in 2000.

The board said Shankman had her liability insurance canceled for nonpayment of premiums.

Assistant AG charged with lewd assault

A state assistant attorney general is facing assault charges after he allegedly masturbated and tried to kiss a cleaning woman at the McCormack Office Building, according to a police report.

Michael Atleson, 34, of Beverly is charged with three counts of accosting a person of the opposite sex, four counts of lewd and lascivious behavior, and one count of assault and battery, according to court records. He will be arraigned at Boston Municipal Court on July 11.

AG office spokeswoman Ann Donlan said the incident was an isolated one and was handled immediately. Atleson has resigned his post at the office.

BACKGROUND

This case has a lengthy history. After a justice of this court allowed FSA's motion to dismiss under Mass.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6), the Appeals Court reversed. See Fabiano v. Boston Redevelopment Auth., 49 Mass.App.Ct. 66 (2000). After remand, the defendants moved for summary judgment before this court. This motion was denied on February 27, 2001 (Fahey, J.). The relevant history of this lengthy litigation is detailed in these two decisions. After the submission of a new affidavit by Paul J. Senk ("Senk"), the Manager of Real Estate, Windsor Facilities Service Office of the United States Postal Service ("USPS"), the defendants again move for summary judgment.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

This court grants summary judgment where there are no genuine issues of material fact and where the summary judgment record entitles the moving party to judgment as a matter of law. See Cassesso v. Commissioner of Correction, 390 Mass. 419, 422 (1983); Community Nat'l Bank v. Dawes, 369 Mass. 550, 553 (1976); Mass. R. Civ. P. 56(c). The moving party bears the burden of affirmatively demonstrating that there is no genuine issue of material fact on every relevant issue. See Pederson v. Time Inc., 404 Mass. 14, 17 (1989). A party moving for summary judgment who does not bear the burden of proof at trial may demonstrate the absence of a triable issue either by submitting affirmative evidence negating an essential element of the nonmoving party's case or by showing that the nonmoving party has no reasonable expectation of proving an essential element of its case at trial. See Flesner v. Technical Communications Corp., 410 Mass. 805, 809 (1991); See also Kourouvacilis v. General Motors Corp., 410 Mass. 706, 716 (1991).

DISCUSSION

The Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution immunizes the activities of the federal government from state interference. See Goodyear Atomic Corp. v. Miller, 486 U.S. 174, 180 n.1 (1988); see also United States Postal Service v. Greenwich, 901 F. Supp. 500, 505 (D.Conn. 1995).

In her decision, Judge Fahey held that the USPS had failed to demonstrate that it would invoke its immunity power if this Court were to grant any relief sought by Fabiano. On the new Motion for Summary Judgment, the sole issue before this court is whether Senk, in his authority as a Contracting Officer for the USPS, invoked the immunity from local zoning regulations on behalf of the USPS and that this Court can no longer grant any of the relief sought by Fabiano.

Before considering the merits of the affidavit, this Court must first determine whether Senk has the authority to invoke sovereign immunity on behalf of the USPS. Fabiano argues that Senk, as a Contracting Officer, lacks the authority to invoke such power on behalf of the USPS. In support of her argument, Fabiano points to the USPS Purchasing Manual, which sets out the authority of a "contracting officer." The Purchasing Manual gives the contracting officer "the authority to enter into, administer, and terminate contracts and to make related decisions." The manual also gives contracting officers "wide latitude to exercise sound business judgment based on the competitive and business needs of the Postal Service."

Fabiano fails to raise more than unsubstantiated speculation that Senk lacks the authority to invoke USPS' immunity. The language of the Purchasing Manual, while vague, certainly does not preclude the invocation of USPS immunity by a Contracting

Officer in regard to leases and local zoning regulations. It would seem unreasonable that such local decisions could only be made by the highest echelons of the USPS. Further, there is nothing in the record that demonstrates such a hierarchical decision system at the USPS. USPS regulations speak to the very point of delegation. The regulations allow any of the powers of the Postmaster General, including the right to invoke the sovereign immunity doctrine, to any officer, employee, or agency of the Postal Service. See 39 CFR 3.5.

In his affidavit, Senk states that he is a Contracting Officer for the lease between the USPS and FSA and that he is responsible for the lessor's compliance with the terms of the Lease. He claims to have the authority to amend the lease with FSA and has done so to eliminate the contractual requirement that FSA comply with local zoning ordinances.

Finally, Senk states:

"Based upon its immunity to local zoning and land use ordinances, the USPS will remain at 1575 Tremont Street for the full lease term, and will not consent to any alterations to the premises at 1575 Tremont Street, regardless of any decision by the Court in this action."

This unequivocal affidavit satisfies the Court that the USPS intends to invoke its sovereign immunity power with respect to the 1575 Tremont Street property. As such, FSA is derivatively immune from any action by Fabiano.

As no genuine issue of material fact exists in the case, this Court finds that the Senk affidavit sufficiently demonstrates the USPS' decision to invoke its immunity from local zoning regulations effecting the property at 1575 Tremont Street. As the Court can no longer grant the relief sought by Fabiano, the Motion for Summary Judgment must be granted.

APPENDIX E
OVERSEAS UNIFORM AND CIVILIAN CLOTHING
REQUIREMENTS

1. This appendix indicates the uniform or civilian clothing prescribed by oversea commanders to be worn within the geographical limits of their commands. Changes to this appendix will be reported to HQDA (DAAG-PBI), WASH, DC 20314 by the following:

- a. CINCUSAREUR
- b. Cdr, USARJ
- c. Cdr, USAREIGHT
- d. Cdr, USA CINCPAC Support Group
- e. Cdr, 193d Inf Bde (Canal Zone)

f. Senior US Army representative (AR 1-78) in any foreign country not included in reports submitted by commanders in a through e above.

2. The following remarks apply to all Defense Attaché Offices (DAO) where Army personnel are assigned: Civilian clothing is the primary dress for all DAO's (duty). The uniform is prescribed at the discretion of the Defense Attaché (DATT) for some official calls, for some social visits, and for wear to certain diplomatic functions.

3. Although wearing of the uniform on leave is authorized in some countries, personnel should be aware of the following information. Members traveling on leave do so in an unofficial capacity and the wearing of civilian clothes could preclude inadvertent provocation of anti-American or anti-military sentiment.

4. The abbreviations utilized are defined as follows:

- a. U—Uniform.
- b. C—Civilian Clothing.
- c. U/C—If no further instructions are indicated in notes, either uniform or civilian clothing may be worn.

Dear Mr. Crapo:

Thank you for sending to us courtesy copies of your letters to Procter & Gamble Co. and the Mony Group, Inc. regarding your shareholder proposals to the companies.

As we previously have noted in our responses to you, we welcome hearing from you because we keep a database of information about the complaints and inquiries we receive. This database allows us to track whether a troubling situation may be developing about a particular issue, company, broker, stock, or other securities product. The information you have provided will be reflected in our database.

We will not do anything more with your letters unless you contact us again. I hope you received the answers you were seeking.

Once again, thank you for sending to us copies of your letters and attendant documents.

Sincerely,

James Daly

*Bathhouses are reigniting the AIDS crisis.
It's time to shut them down.*

BY TOM FARLEY

JUDGING FROM THE DESCRIPTIONS I'VE read and heard, the bathhouse I visited not long ago is fairly typical. Pay $8 to the clerk behind the Plexiglas window and he'll give you a towel and buzz you in. Inside are hallways of private rooms for sex, each about six by six feet, or just big enough for a thin mattress and a little maneuvering beside it. The rest of the bathhouse is mostly comprised of different areas for men to "cruise"—to check out the other bodies and decide which one to bring back to a room. These include a gym (complete with free weights, Nautilus equipment, and aerobic trainers), a sauna, Jacuzzi, and group showers. Elsewhere, gay porn videos play to help men get aroused. For those who like to watch, be watched, or have group sex, there are also orgy areas, including a fantasy "jail," a picnic table for men to lean over when receiving anal sex, and "slings" into which men can strap themselves to expose their anus for anyone who happens by.

Bathhouses are wholly designed to facilitate anonymous sex—sex as a purely physical act, without context, past, or future. But the most anonymous areas of all are the "maze" and the "glory hole" booths. The maze is completely black, a tangle of paths and dead ends defined by vertical sheets of darkly painted plywood where men grope until they find one or more receptive bodies. The booths are paired and separated by plywood through which fist-sized holes have been cut at hip level. Men manage to have not just oral but also anal sex through these holes, guaranteeing that each hasn't the slightest idea with whom he is copulating. With the act of sex stripped to its essential physical steps, it is easy—and quite common—for patrons to have sexual contact with several men in a single visit.

Even beyond their physical designs, baths influence their patrons' behavior by maintaining certain clear-cut rules. "Most bathhouse cruising is non-verbal," advises a bathhouse Web site, which also makes it clear that "most of the time you don't learn each other's names." "Conversations in the orgy rooms should be kept to a minimum," advises another site. Also, "It is considered embarrassing to make it with someone you already know," and "It is uncommon to use condoms during oral sex." One bathhouse Web site even has its own Miss Manners, a column called "Ask Towel Boy" in which a veteran gives practical answers to such questions as "Is it a social misdeed to walk around nude all the time?" and "How do I refuse someone's advances without offending them?"

Although they are small in number, bathhouses have an impressive reach. One survey found only about 80 bathhouses and sex clubs in the entire United States. But a recent study of gay men in major cities revealed that nearly one-third had visited such a place in the previous year. Furthermore, surveys of men who frequent baths confirm what their surroundings encourage: On average, bathhouse patrons have had sex with more than 30 different men in the previous six months. Baths can serve thousands of men per week, and major gay gatherings such as New Orleans' "Decadence" and Mardi Gras attract men from all over the country. Not surprisingly, this makes them critical hotspots for the spread of sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV.

Bathhouses like the one I visited became infamous for their role in spreading the AIDS virus in the 1980s. The disease raced through gay men in magnet cities like San Francisco, Los Angeles, and New York because it was so easily spread through the dense sexual networks centered in the baths. Many bathhouses were shut down at the time in an effort to contain the epidemic. But while the number of bathhouses is lower now than in the 1980s, most major U.S. cities still have at least one, and the behavior of customers has grown steadily riskier in recent years, to the point where there is now an explosion of syphilis among bathhouse clientele. When I was medical director for the HIV and STD program at the Louisiana Office of Public Health, part of my job was to keep an eye open for such outbreaks, since syphilis—which causes open sores on the genitalia and makes it easier to transmit disease—often presages an outbreak of HIV. If public health officials don't respond effectively, the current syphilis outbreak could cause HIV to again spread through communities like wildfire. Today, more than two decades after the start of the AIDS epidemic and 15 years after public health officials and bathhouse owners first clashed over the problem, it is once again time to take a hard look at the evidence and either radically change the way they do business or shut them down altogether.

Sex in the City

The last time public health officials worried about syphilis outbreaks among gay men was in the late 1970s and early 1980s, when bathhouses were in their prime. Syphilis rates hit a decade-long peak during the unfolding tragedy of the then-mysterious AIDS epidemic in 1983. At the time, a French-Canadian flight attendant named Gaetan Dugas was a loyal bathhouse customer. According to Randy Shiltz, the reporter who wrote the history of the early AIDS epidemic, And the Band Played On, Dugas was blond, handsome, and ravenous for partners. His job took him to cities throughout North America, where, by his own claim, he had sex with 250 men a year for at least three years. Later, when he became one of the first men diagnosed with the "gay cancer" of Kaposi's sarcoma, William Darrow, a disease control specialist for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, managed to link Dugas to 40 of the first 248 AIDS cases diagnosed in this country in 10 different cities. Although Dugas is infamous for his role in spreading HIV, AIDS researchers believe that if he hadn't, many others could have taken his place. This is because of the way gay men were having sex at the time. Bathhouses, which had been small, seedy, and advertised only by word of mouth in the 1950s and early 1960s, flourished to become a central part of urban gay life in the 1970s. Statistics are hard to come by, but one report claims that more than 50 percent of gay men in major cities visited the baths; 20 percent described their visits as "somewhat" or "very" frequent.

Between 1979 and 1984, with syphilis peaking and bathhouses serving thousands of men a week, HIV tore through the gay population in magnet cities like San Francisco and New York. Reconstructions of the epidemic estimate that close to half of gay men in these cities—and between 270,000 and 490,000 nationwide—became infected in just these few years. As gay men, public health officials, and finally the nation began to comprehend the true horror of the AIDS epidemic, a few began to call for the bathhouses to be shut down. San Francisco mayor Dianne Feinstein first raised the issue with health director Mervyn Silverman in 1982, but, under pressure from gay groups, Silverman initially balked. By late 1984, with the number of AIDS cases in San Francisco reaching about 750, reports by private detectives outlining the continuing high-risk sex in bathhouses, and a survey showing that 10 percent of gay men in San Francisco were still visiting the baths, Silverman ordered them shut down. The following year, the number of gay men newly infected with HIV declined dramatically. The public closure of San Francisco's baths is what many people remember of those days, but the story doesn't end there. The bathhouses sued the city, and a California Superior Court judge allowed them to reopen, provided they took the doors off the private rooms and booths, so men could be monitored, and hired staff to roam through the baths, kicking out any men engaged in "unsafe sexual practices."

The bathhouse closures in San Francisco put political pressure on other AIDS hotspots to do the same. By late 1985, New York allowed local officials to close establishments in which sex was taking place. New York City mayor Ed Koch declared the rules to be "inadequate" and unenforceable, but nonetheless pushed for a court order and closed several bathhouses. The Los Angeles Board of Supervisors passed regulations in 1986 requiring bathhouse owners to police their establishments and eject anyone engaging in high-risk sex. As stories of bathhouse behavior spread, similar rules were passed in other cities.

As the public saw the government respond to the AIDS epidemic and shut down baths and as the HIV epidemic seemed to slow among gay men, however, this vigilance diminished. Battles continued out of the public eye, and many baths managed to stay open or have since reopened, with little oversight from health departments. In San Francisco, the baths were replaced by "sex clubs"—essentially bathhouses without enclosed rooms, in keeping with the judge's order. In New York, four bathhouses never closed. The city began regular inspections, but decided to limit its oversight to sex taking place in plain sight. "We've demonstrated our concern," State Health Commissioner David Axelrod told The New York Times in 1987, adding that he did not "believe it is the responsibility of the government to enter into someone's home. And we view the doors of the private rooms the same way." Likewise, in other cities, the private rooms remained and government officials gave up trying to close them. When government oversight relaxed, not only did the baths remain, but barely a year after the highly publicized closings, their popularity rose once again. By 1987, business had "gone up 20 to 25 percent," said the owner of a New York City bathhouse.

Violating the "Code"

Over the past 15 years, bathhouses have continued to operate mostly out of view of the general public, even though they are widely known to gay men. During the mid-1980s, as gay men watched their friends go from healthy to dead in weeks, the "condom code" took over, and even in the baths condom use became the expected norm. Since then, though, with HIV-fighting drug cocktails keeping HIV-infected men not just alive, but also looking and feeling healthy, the AIDS epidemic has lost the profound emotional impact it once had, and the number of sexually active infected men has skyrocketed. Throughout the 1990s gay men increasingly abandoned condoms. As "barebacking" has become more frequent in the baths, they have again become focal points for the spread of various sexually transmitted diseases. The most convincing (and alarming) evidence of this return of risky sexual behavior among gays is the resurgence of syphilis. After a national epidemic related to crack and prostitution in the late 1980s, rates of syphilis had dwindled low enough that in the late 1990s the CDC announced a plan to eradicate the disease altogether. But in 1999 and 2000, clusters of syphilis in gay men cropped up in several cities where the AIDS epidemic first took off. In New York, Los Angeles, and San Francisco, the number of cases of syphilis in homosexual men approximately doubled every year from 1998 through 2001, and it looks like they will double again this year.

In its primary and secondary stages, syphilis induces raw, oozing genital sores in which the syphilis spirochetes multiply, eager to hitch a ride on the next sex partner. These sores cause breaks in the protective layer of skin, which exposes a person's blood and immune cells to his partner's, thus throwing open the door to HIV. Experts believe that syphilis may increase the probability that HIV transmission will occur in a single sex act by a factor of anywhere from 10 to 50. While the number of new syphilis cases in gay men may seem small—in 2001 there were between 100 and 150 cases each in New York, Los Angeles, and San Francisco—the combined total in these cities alone is more than the 251 persons who had been reported to CDC as having AIDS in February 1982, by which time the CDC had convened a national task force to track the emergency. Perhaps most disturbing, about half of the men infected with syphilis are also infected with HIV—a pattern that not only shows how often HIV-positive men are having unprotected sex today, but also all but guarantees that syphilis will have a huge impact on how quickly HIV is spread.

The syphilis outbreaks seem to be centered in the baths. Cities that have compiled data on the issue found that infected men like one-time pick-up sex, a practice that ensures that their partner's name remains as foreign to them as their HIV status. In California, about 25 percent of men with syphilis had had sex in baths or clubs during the time in which they were likely infected; in Seattle the number was 46 percent. In several cities, the CDC is investigating the baths' role in the epidemic. And while the results are not yet public, local health officials whom I spoke with in Los Angeles and New York were emphatic that the baths and sex clubs were critically important to the epidemics.

To health professionals such as me, syphilis outbreaks in bathhouses are a nightmare. History shows that once syphilis gets rolling, it can quickly reach epidemic proportions. Going by the number of homosexual men acquiring syphilis last year and the fact that infections are doubling every year, by 2004 there could be 12,000 cases a year—enough to qualify as the next epidemic wave of syphilis in America. With it will also come the next wave of HIV: These new syphilis cases could increase the number of gay men newly infected by HIV by thousands per year. The potential of such leaps in the number of HIV infections two decades after we've learned how to prevent them ought to scare us into action.

Risky Business

Bathhouses are not just a haven for risky sex; in many ways they promote it. It is clear that many gay men find anonymous sex appealing, and that as long as there is a place where no-strings-attached sex with strangers is sanctioned, supported, and encouraged, plenty of them will go. But once men arrive at baths for sex, the surroundings can strongly influence how they have it.

David McKirnan, a psychologist at the University of Illinois, points out that condom use during sex "is an externally imposed diet that may not require a very powerful external stimulus to break down." In other words, the fantasy environment and sexual smorgasbord of a bathhouse are more than enough of a stimulus for many men to forego condoms. McKirnan argues that "the physical features of many sexual situations may facilitate cognitive disengagement, e.g., bars or clubs that are extremely loud, poorly lit, or that present erotic visual stimulation, or sexual settings that stress anonymity." So the very features of a bathhouse that make it easy to have sex also make it easier to have dangerous sex.

The best way—and perhaps the only way—to prevent a big new epidemic of HIV in gay men is to close these bathhouses for good. Yet, suggest this obvious solution and you will hear a litany of reasons from both gay men and many public health officials about why it can't or shouldn't be done.

The most common refrain is that if we close bathhouses, patrons will simply go someplace else for pick-up sex, and since other venues are less likely to offer condoms and reminders about safe sex, the men are likely to take even more risks. I don't buy this argument for several reasons. First, while it's true that many places besides bathhouses and sex clubs offer anonymous sex ("back rooms" of many gay bars, adult bookstores, public bathrooms, or secluded spots in municipal parks, and even temporary bathhouse-like scenes in apartments organized over the Internet), the assumption that men deprived of formal bathhouses will necessarily go elsewhere for pick-up sex is suspect. It is what Shilts derided as the "sex maniac" defense of the baths: Any gay man who derives pleasure from the bathhouse orgy scene must be so crazed that he is not influenced by the world around him.

There is much evidence to suggest that this is not so. The stories written by bath patrons on Web sites indicate that some—perhaps many—men visit baths somewhat tentatively, experimenting in havens for anonymous sex. "My friends talked me into some funny stuff to remove my inhibitions on the first time visit," wrote one, who apparently got very high or very comfortable, because later "I must have sucked about 30 guys through the glory hole." Another explained, "I consider myself straight but curious... [O]ne afternoon when my wife was at work and I had the day off... I got an odd urge to check on the gay scene, thinking it was just a curiosity." He then described how he was the anal receptive partner for four men in the space of just a few minutes. If these men had been forced to find anonymous partners in public bathrooms or the bushes of a city park, they might have decided to stay home. Daniel Wohlfeiler, an HIV prevention researcher at the University of California at San Francisco, who is as familiar with the baths as any expert, told me he is convinced that if the baths were closed, "a bunch" of men would not go elsewhere. The demand for anonymous sex is "somewhat determined by the supply" of places where men can get it.

Second, the argument that bathhouse sex is safer than sex elsewhere is just plain wrong. While bathhouses don't sell alcohol, many men drink at bars or take drugs elsewhere before visiting them. Given the level of intoxication of bath patrons, any intentions to have safe sex are often lost in a fog of drugs. Everyone I spoke to agreed that men in baths virtually never use condoms during oral sex. Even during the far-riskier practice of anal sex, men frequently "bareback." Twenty-one percent of those surveyed at a Portland bathhouse who had had anal sex did so without a condom.

Third, even if men in the baths went elsewhere for sex, it's unlikely that they would have the same type of sex. Physical and social settings have a great deal of influence on what actually occurs. It is more complicated to have anal sex (with or without a condom) in a public restroom or behind a park bush, where sex is rushed for fear of getting caught, than it is in a bathhouse. Consequently, these men are more likely to have oral sex, which is less likely to spread HIV. In a broad survey of behavior in four large cities, 34 percent of bathhouse patrons had had unprotected anal sex, versus only 20 percent in other cruising spots. Perhaps even more important, it would be nearly impossible for men to have multiple partners in a single park encounter—but in bathhouses, it's routine. History also argues that closing baths does indeed lower risky behavior. After San Francisco closed its baths in 1984, the number of men who had multiple partners or engaged in risky sex plummeted by about 60 percent.

But perhaps most important is the epidemiological effect that baths have on spreading sexually transmitted diseases. Most people who acquire STDs do not spread them to others, either because they have only a single sex partner (who infected them) during the period in which they're infectious, or because they use condoms when straying from their partner. Conversely, the relatively few people who change partners very frequently—such as bathhouse visitors—can infect scores. Experts who develop mathematical models of STD epidemics call these people “core transmitters.” They are, as one writer put it, the people who “keep the critical mass critical.” If an infected core transmitter comes into contact with men who are unlikely to spread the disease—even a large number of them—he will infect many, but won’t trigger an epidemic. If, on the other hand, a core transmitter has sex with just a few other core transmitters, something akin to a nuclear chain reaction takes place, causing the disease to explode in a population. One need look no further than the example of America’s most famous core transmitter, bathhouse enthusiast Gaetan Dugas.

When I suggested to colleagues at the STD meeting that the baths should be closed, many (though not all) agreed. But even those who agreed seemed to recoil at the idea of actually doing it.

mitter has sex with just a few other core transmitters, something akin to a nuclear chain reaction takes place, causing the disease to explode in a population. One need look no further than the example of America’s most famous core transmitter, bathhouse enthusiast Gaetan Dugas.

Thus the speed at which HIV travels through a population is determined in large part by who is having sex with whom. The best way to spark an epidemic is to create opportunities for core transmitters to have sex with each other. Bathhouses—magnets for core transmitters designed precisely for one-time sex with multiple partners—do just that.

Power to the People?

When I told several colleagues at a recent national STD meeting that I thought the resurgence of gay men having anonymous sex probably spelled the end of our hopes of eliminating syphilis and a comeback of the AIDS epidemic, all agreed. But rather than jump into discussions about how to respond, most seemed to fall into despair.

This stems partly from a pervasive feeling of powerlessness. Dr. Peter Kerndt, the director for the STD Program at the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services, told me, “If the gay community won’t protect itself, we can’t protect them.” I’ve heard variations on this sentiment from many public health professionals, but it continues to puzzle me. Clearly, the gay community as a whole is supportive of safe sex, since the majority of men either don’t frequent baths or use con-dooms when they do. It is unclear to me what the “gay community” can do about the minority of men who continue having high-risk sex. Without an organizing structure, designated leaders, or an enforcement arm, it is they who are powerless. Bathhouses are, after all, for-profit businesses that trade in anonymous sex and risk losing money if they stop providing an experience (unsafe sex) that appeals to even a minority of customers; they simply can’t be trusted to police themselves.

Government, on the other hand, is supposed to have the power to prevent a few people or businesses from threatening the broader public health. The despair among government officials like my colleagues stems from a structure and culture developed during the AIDS epidemic that is based on inclusion and cooperation rather than enforcement. This government culture seems to have grown as a response to AIDS activism in the 1980s, which itself was a response to the lethargy government agencies initially displayed toward this plague of historic proportions. AIDS activism, which embraced such tactics as haranguing experts at scientific meetings, blockading FDA headquarters, and pressuring politicians to cough up public money for prevention and treatment, effectively prodded government agencies into taking steps to curb the epidemic that otherwise might never have happened. But in an era when politicians of all stripes argued that all government was bad, it also made agencies adopt a very defensive posture. To deflect criticism, public health agencies began accepting on faith that all of their own judgments were faulty, that all opponents had legitimate positions, and that all interested people (no matter how self-interested) should be appeased by including them in decision-making.

Public health agencies, operating HIV prevention programs based in large part on grants from the CDC, are required by congressional mandate to spend these funds under the direction of a committee “representing the community” and co-chaired by a community member. In most cases this means the majority of committee members are gay men, former drug users, and others who work with them, most of whom vigorously protect the right of high-risk people to do what they want to do. As beneficial as this system may be in building mutual trust, it prohibits health departments from taking virtually any action to prevent AIDS that contains even the barest whiff of enforcement. Inclusion can be a good thing in planning public policy—but it can also be taken too far, as when it gives people veto power that imperils public health. Imagine if the local health department couldn't shut down a restaurant serving salmonella without first securing the permission of restaurant owners.

TEN (10) OF 15th seen (15)

Because of this structure and the culture surrounding it, little enforcement actually occurs in the baths around the country. In San Francisco, health officials inspect sex clubs about twice a month to make sure that safe-sex posters are displayed and condoms are available; they also write vaguely threatening letters to clubs named by patients with syphilis as permitting unprotected sex. New York takes almost the opposite approach; the city sends inspectors to gay bars and other sites to make sure customers are not having sex in open areas, and will shut them down if they are; but it ignores baths where sex takes place behind closed doors. To my knowledge, baths in other cities are unfettered by health inspectors.

This lackluster state of enforcement is the final remnant of the bathhouse battles of the 1980s: Elected officials delegated decision-making to the courts, which delegated it to health departments, which educated owners about safe sex and then delegated enforcement to them. Bathhouse owners, in turn, delegated responsibility to their patrons, who stopped using condoms and once again started spreading HIV and syphilis.

When I suggested to several colleagues at the STD meeting that the baths should be closed, many (though not all) agreed. But even those who agreed seemed to recoil at the idea of actually doing it. The reason is partly the past success of our cooperative approach to HIV prevention. But I can't help wondering if a part of the reason is also fear—fear of being shouted down at meetings by activists, or of being politically undercut or fired by elected officials, some of whom may receive campaign donations from bathhouse owners and gay advocacy groups. The risks don't stop there, though. Dr. Jeffrey Klausner, the director of STD Prevention and Control Services in San Francisco, was quoted in a Washington Monthly story last November ("When Rubbers Hit the Road," by Andrew Webb) as being in favor of closing sex clubs; he received repeated death threats, as did his family. During the bathhouse battles of 1984, Shilts writes, San Francisco health director Mervyn Silverman received so many death threats that he started wearing a bulletproof vest.

Ban the Baths

Most baths do take steps to encourage condom use. They have reminder posters on the walls, and bowls of condoms placed throughout the establishment. Some offer regular HIV testing. But prevention usually stops there. Many baths do not even have signs telling men that sex without condoms is forbidden, much less eject them if rules are violated. Because of the cooperative model for containing AIDS that arose in the 1980s and still reigns, public health agencies are at a tremendous disadvantage: Even those that recognize the danger of bathhouses can only try various modes of persuasion.

To prevent the spread of HIV, most agencies fund community-based AIDS service organizations that conduct "outreach to" (not "inspections of") bathhouses, an approach not of enforcement but supplication. As Wohlfeiler put it, public health officials are usually grateful when owners are "magnanimous" enough to let them in the door. This encouragement-without-enforcement approach seemed to work in the late 1980s, when gay men terrified of the epidemic adopted condoms pretty faithfully. But the syphilis outbreaks now make it clear that we need a new strategy. With the activists and the courts potentially protecting the status quo in bathhouses, it's worth considering what steps could be taken short of outright closure. One possibility is for cities nationwide to couple San Francisco's ban on sex in closed-door rooms with serious enforcement of condom use, so that public health inspectors can catch—and stop—risky behavior. There is evidence to suggest that a strict enforcement policy could work. Buzz Bense, the owner of a San Francisco sex club called Club Eros, requires customers to read and sign an agreement stipulating that they will follow the rules, which include using condoms. Club goers have sex in open, well-lit rooms, observed by staff members who circulate at regular intervals. Those caught having anal sex without condoms are kicked out; repeat offenders lose their membership. Bense says that customers accept these rules (he throws out fewer than five a month) and even appreciate them, since they no longer have to negotiate condom use. But to reliably prevent HIV spread, even strict enforcement by club owners would require an additional layer of government enforcement.

Until recently, the HIV epidemic seemed to be waning in all major groups: gay men, IV drug users, and high-risk heterosexuals. But the syphilis outbreaks not only tell us that our hopes of eliminating this disease with the next decade are gone, but also confirm predictions that we will see a second wave of HIV infection in gay men. If we want to keep this second wave at bay we must make dramatic changes in how we deal with the baths. Unless we are willing to hire plenty of full-time condom inspectors for the long haul—a strategy that history tells us may fail—we ought to finish the job we started in the 1980s and close the baths for good. ●

Part 1: Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN)
 Use Form W-9 if you are a U.S. person (including a resident alien), to give your correct TIN to the person requesting it. Enter your TIN in the appropriate box. For individuals, this is your social security number (SSN). Generally, enter the name shown on your social security card on the "Name" line. If you are a resident alien and you do not have and are not eligible to get an SSN, your TIN is your IRS individual taxpayer identification number (ITIN). If you are a sole proprietor, the IRS prefers that you use your SSN, although you may enter your employer identification number (EIN). You must enter your individual name as shown on your social security card on the "Name" line. You may enter your business, trade, or "doing business as" name on the "Business name" line. If you are a single-member Limited liability company (LLC) that is disregarded as an entity separate from its owner and are owned by an individual, enter your SSN (or "pre-LLC" EIN, if desired). If the owner of a disregarded LLC is a corporation, partnership, etc., enter the owner's EIN. Enter the owner's name on the "Name" line. Enter the LLC's name on the "Business Name" line. For other entities, use your EIN and enter your business name on the "Name" line. If you do not have a number, apply for one immediately. Write "Applied For" in the space for the TIN, sign and date the form, and give it to the requester.

Certification. Under penalties of perjury, I certify that:

- The number shown on this form is my correct Taxpayer Identification Number (or I am waiting for a number to be issued to me).
- I am not subject to backup withholding because: (a) I am exempt from backup withholding, or (b) I have not been notified by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) that I am subject to backup withholding as a result of a failure to report all interest or dividends, or (c) the IRS has notified me that I am no longer subject to backup withholding, and
- I am a U.S. person (including a U.S. resident alien).

Certification (Part 2). You must cross out item 2 above if you have been notified by the IRS that you are currently subject to backup withholding because you have failed to report all interest and dividends on your tax return. For real estate transactions, item 2 does not apply. For mortgage interest, acquisition or abandonment of secured property, cancellation of debt, contributions to an individual retirement arrangement (IRA), and certain payments other than interest and dividends, you are not required to sign the Certification, but you must provide your correct TIN.

3. You may require me to prepay for any order. I agree to pay for all transactions no later than settlement date. You shall have a general lien on all properties I may have on deposit with you either singly or jointly with another or otherwise and may, without notice to me or my successors, at your discretion, liquidate or transfer any such property in order to satisfy any indebtedness I may have to you or to relieve you of any risk of a deficit existing in any of my accounts. I shall be liable for any remaining deficiency in any of my accounts. You may conduct all transactions for me in accordance with the customs and usages of securities firms and of the various exchanges.
4. I will advise you if any of my sell orders are for securities which I do not own at the time of the order.
5. You may, at your discretion, decline to accept any orders or deliver out my account or require that I transfer my account from your firm. I understand that if I do not promptly transfer my account upon your demand, you reserve the right to liquidate positions in my account at your discretion.
6. Unless otherwise agreed in writing, I agree to pay commissions, charges, interest and fees at your prevailing rates which may be changed from time to time without notice to me, and to pay your reasonable attorneys' fees and interest at the highest lawful rate in the event you must take legal action to collect any amounts due from me to you.
7. Confirmation of transactions and statements for my accounts shall be binding upon me if I do not object in writing within ten days after mailing to me. I agree to promptly notify you by a writing addressed to the Branch Manager of the branch in which my account is maintained of any item I believe to be an error or omission in any confirmation or statement. I will so notify the Branch Manager even if an employee of the firm has promised to correct any such error. Communications mailed, wired, or telegraphed to me at the address specified by me shall, until you have received notice in writing from me of a different address, be deemed to have been personally delivered to me and I agree to waive all claims resulting from failure to receive such communications.
8. If any provision or condition of this agreement shall be held to be invalid or unenforceable by any court, regulatory or self-regulatory agency or body, such invalidity or unenforceability shall attach only to such provision or condition. Your failure to insist at any time upon strict compliance with this agreement or with any of its terms or any continued course of such conduct on your part shall not constitute or be considered a waiver by you of any of your rights.
9. This agreement shall inure to the benefit of your successors and assigns, shall be binding on me, my representatives, attorneys-in-fact, executors, administrators and assigns, and beneficial owners and shall be governed by the laws of the State of New York. In the event of my death, any order which I had given you shall be binding on my estate representative until you receive actual notice thereof.
10. Your client accounts are protected by SIPC and Wexford's excess SIPC coverage. FDIC rules require that clients be informed that you are not a bank and that securities offered through you are not backed or guaranteed by any bank or insured by the FDIC unless otherwise expressly indicated.
11. Arbitration is final and binding on the parties.
 - The parties are waiving their right to seek remedies in court, including the right to jury trial.
 - Pre-arbitration discovery is generally more limited than and different from court proceedings.
 - The arbitrators' award is not required to include factual findings or legal reasoning and any party's right to appeal or to seek modification of rulings by the arbitrators is strictly limited.
 - The panel of arbitrators will typically include a minority of arbitrators who were or are affiliated with the securities industry.

The undersigned agrees, and by carrying an account for the undersigned you agree, all controversies which may arise between us concerning any transaction or the construction, performance or breach of this or any other agreement between us, whether entered into prior, on or subsequent to the date hereof, shall be determined by arbitration.

This contract shall be governed by the laws of the State of New York, and shall inure to the benefit of your successors and assigns, and shall be binding on the undersigned, my heirs, executors, representatives, attorneys-in-fact, administrators and assigns. Any controversy arising out of or relating to my account, to transactions with or for me or to this Agreement or the breach thereof, and whether executed or to be executed within or outside of the United States, shall be settled by arbitration before either the New York Stock Exchange, Inc. or the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. or any other self-regulatory organization of which you or your clearing firm is a member, as I may elect and under the then existing arbitration procedures of the forum I have elected. If I do not make such election by registered mail addressed to you at your main office within five (5) days after demand by you that I make such election, then you may make such election. Notice preliminary to, in conjunction with, or incident to such arbitration proceeding, may be sent to me by mail and personal service is hereby waived. Judgment upon any award rendered by the arbitrators may be entered in any court having jurisdiction thereof, without notice to me. No person shall bring a putative or certified class action to arbitration, nor seek to enforce any pre-dispute arbitration agreement against any person who has initiated in court a putative class action; or who is a member of a putative class who has not opted out of the class with respect to any claims encompassed by the putative class action until: (i) the class certification is denied; or (ii) the class is decertified; or (iii) the customer is excluded from the class by the court. Such forbearance to enforce an agreement to arbitrate shall not constitute a waiver of any rights under this agreement except to the extent stated herein.

I agree that Wexford Clearing Services, Inc. and its agents are third party beneficiaries of this agreement and that the terms and conditions hereof including the arbitration provisions, shall be applicable to all matters between or among myself and either my broker, Wexford Clearing Services Corp. or its agents.

By signing this agreement, the client hereby certifies that he/she has received a copy of this agreement.

This agreement contains a pre-dispute arbitration clause at page 1 at paragraph 11.

DIVISION OF CORPORATION FINANCE
INFORMAL PROCEDURES REGARDING SHAREHOLDER PROPOSALS

The Division of Corporation Finance believes that its responsibility with respect to matters arising under Rule 14a-8 [17 CFR 240.14a-8], as with other matters under the proxy rules, is to aid those who must comply with the rule by offering informal advice and suggestions and to determine, initially, whether or not it may be appropriate in a particular matter to recommend enforcement action to the Commission. In connection with a shareholder proposal under Rule 14a-8, the Division's staff considers the information furnished to it by the Company in support of its intention to exclude the proposals from the Company's proxy materials, as well as any information furnished by the proponent or the proponent's representative.

Although Rule 14a-8(k) does not require any communications from shareholders to the Commission's staff, the staff will always consider information concerning alleged violations of the statutes administered by the Commission, including argument as to whether or not activities proposed to be taken would be violative of the statute or rule involved. The receipt by the staff of such information, however, should not be construed as changing the staff's informal procedures and proxy review into a formal or adversary procedure.

It is important to note that the staff's and Commission's no-action responses to Rule 14a-8(j) submissions reflect only informal views. The determinations reached in these no-action letters do not and cannot adjudicate the merits of a company's position with respect to the proposal. Only a court such as a U.S. District Court can decide whether a company is obligated to include shareholder proposals in its proxy materials. Accordingly a discretionary determination not to recommend or take Commission enforcement action, does not preclude a proponent, or any shareholder of a company, from pursuing any rights he or she may have against the company in court, should the management omit the proposal from the company's proxy material.

Re: The MONY Group Inc.
Incoming letter dated November 21, 2002

The proposal recommends that MONY's proxy statement contain information described in the proposal regarding MONY's charitable donations program.

We are unable to concur in your view that MONY may exclude the proposal under rule 14a-8(d). Accordingly, we do not believe that MONY may omit the proposal from its proxy materials in reliance on rule 14a-8(d).

We are unable to concur in your view that MONY may exclude the entire proposal under rule 14a-8(i)(3). However, there appears to be some basis for your view that the entire supporting statement may be excluded under rule 14a-8(i)(3). Accordingly, we will not recommend enforcement action to the Commission if MONY omits the entire supporting statement from its proxy materials in reliance on rule 14a-8(i)(3).

We are unable to concur in your view that MONY may exclude the proposal under rule 14a-8(i)(4). Accordingly, we do not believe that MONY may omit the proposal from its proxy materials in reliance on rule 14a-8(i)(4).

We are unable to concur in your view that MONY may exclude the proposal under rule 14a-8(i)(10). Accordingly, we do not believe that MONY may omit the proposal from its proxy materials in reliance on rule 14a-8(i)(10).

Sincerely,

Jennifer Bowes
