SPL WorldGroup Announces Leadership Change

May 8, 2003, Morristown, NJ, USA — Trevor Winer, Chairman of the Board at SPL WorldGroup, has announced that CD Hobbs, who joined SPL as CEO in 2000, has left the company to pursue other interests.

"CD Hobbs has led SPL through an important transition," said Winer. "On his watch, the company exceeded its revenue and profitability targets in a very difficult market." SPL had revenues of $111 million in 2002, 14 percent higher than revenues in calendar year 2001.

Winer also pointed to Hobbs' industry leadership. "When he joined us three years ago," Winer said, "few utilities imagined that they could replace legacy, custom CIS with a packaged, vendor-supported customer management system. Today, in no small measure as a result of his leadership, the question utility CIOs ask is not if they will move to a packaged customer management product, but when."

Winer, an SPL founder and CEO until his retirement, will head up operations, while fellow Board member Roger Peirce directs the search for a new CEO. "We will take a measured approach to identify the best candidate to lead SPL," Winer commented about the search for a new CEO. Winer also noted that "we are fortunate to have a very experienced senior management team and superb and committed employees throughout our worldwide offices to service our customers and continue to capitalize on our market position."
