

Re: IEX FORM 1 APPLICATION File no. 10-222

Shouldn't all the nice people that have taken time out of their day to submit commentary on the IEX application be informed that the same exchanges that have previously submitted letters criticizing the IEX trading platform (NYSE, NASDAQ, BATS) are now (ironically) developing their own "speed bumps"?

Because that is definitely something all the nice people should know when they are taking such commentary into consideration, and weighing whether those exchanges submitted genuine arguments that had merit, or whether their arguments were BASELESS, or mere DELAY-TACTICS.

I guess when IEX proposes the use of a speed bump in a national exchange "it is un-American and it's not fair and it's not the way that our system should work"*; BUT when NYSE does it, it is freedom, liberty, Chevrolet, apple pie, and screamin' eagle.

*quoted language = statement made by CEO of NYSE's parent corp.

Just keep doing you, SEC; you got till June...no rush.
