Re: Pay Ratio Disclosure, File No. S7-07-13

Dear Ms. Murphy,

In this day and age of "transparency" in government, within the corporations themselves, having to do with the employees, I think it's also appropriate for those at the top of the corporate structure to also submit to that.

I strongly support regulations that would require publicly-traded companies to disclose CEO-to-median worker pay ratios. As income inequality reaches unprecedented heights, the public has the right to know which corporations are fueling the yawning gap between rich and poor. (A gap which in the long run is good for no one.)

Disclosure of CEO-to-worker pay ratios are also crucial for investors. This information is important for determining whether corporations are diverting resources to executives at the expense of long-term investments and workforce development. Additionally, investors need to be able to gauge whether executives' compensation is falling in line with their performance.

Sincerely,

Louisa Holmes
