Dear Ms. Murphy:

As co-owner of Data Forms, Inc. and part owner of DFI Technologies Inc., I am highly opposed to the proposed shareholder proxy access rule. It seems that more and more policies have single, extreme goals in mind, environmentalist or otherwise. A rule like this is hard to see in any other light. Once passed, any group could easily garner the access necessary to push their agendas on a company. This is dangerous from a business perspective and unfortunate from a practical perspective.

While we are not a publicly-traded company, many of our customers are. Our future is largely hinging on the ability of our customers to purchase the forms and documents that we provide, as well as the mail services that we offer. Those products and services have met a need in the business community of our area thus far for the past two decades. In fact, just five years after our company began in 1982, we were named to the Inc 500 list as one of the fastest growing small businesses in America. Without the continued stability of the customers and vendors that we work with, our own success could be placed in jeopardy.

With proposal after proposal being introduced by the federal government attacking the business community, one begins to wonder what underlying motivations there may be. This rule, in particular, caters more to those seeking to further their own purposes, without consideration of what benefits the whole. Those who sustain businesses must make decisions based upon many factors in order to advance the company. A company struggling from within is of no profit to anyone. In order for us to recover as a nation, our businesses must stand strong. As such, I request that the proposed rule be denied passage.

Sincerely,

Mike Emis President
