

Swaps is just another way of hiding your short or long position. As this is not public information (these days), I and every other retail trader is at a disadvantage when trading. We need information to make good decisions.

We need reporting on large, or even smaller swap positions. As big companies are able to create smaller family offices to exploit holes in the rule. So, let's start reporting on all Swap positions.

The fact that CFTC expanded their no-show policy to publicly show swap data makes my trust in the US stock trading system quite thin.

Thank you for your time, and thank you for making the markets more transparent and fairer. This is a good start and a step in the right direction.

Sincerely,
Christopher R. K.
Norwegian Retail investor