

Please, do not allow Natural Asset Companies to be listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

I am 76 years old and live on a small, 20-acre farm. Please know that I believe and concur with the many U.S. Attorneys General who now are saying in concert that allowing “natural asset companies” to be publicly traded would be counter to laws meant to protect investors and the public—I am an investor—I am the Public. As the owners of a small farm, my family believes what has been said: Natural asset companies would halt farming, grazing, mining, logging and drilling and would likely never generate any revenue, leaving the United States poorer and more reliant on foreign countries for vital resources. My family and I are aware of this environmental scheme based on elitest, want-to-grab-power ambitions. I own the air above my farm; I own the rain that God sends to my farm based on my heartfelt, prayerful requests to Him. I am the one who works and sweats for this air and rain; I pay taxes for it; I tend to it, to my farm, my animals, my family, etc.

I understand that the NYSE and Intrinsic Exchange Group, the private company that developed the proposal, need permission from the SEC to list natural asset companies, which would invest in "ecosystem services," such as "climate stability." Please stand against this; do not give your permission. I certainly am not giving my permission.

I concur with others who believe that asserting this is a bad policy and violates the Securities Exchange Act.
